Air, Water, Power
Here's Romance
Pursuing Beetles
A Serious Mikado

—By Arthur Brisbane—

President Roosevelt, praising workers in the Tennessee Valley for their efficiency, made one of the most important speeches that he, or any other President or ruler of a country, ever made.

He promises CHEAP POWER. Not all the plans to drive away depression could do one-tenth as much as really cheap power for all.

Nature gave man free air and free water, not much else free.

If science and wise government can add to free air and free water POWER UNLIMITED, as nearly free as possible, that will mean another step toward the desired millennium.

Cheap power for farms, factories and homes; cheap power, giving the light necessary for study, power that means conquest of nature and her hardships, will free men from slavery.

There are at least ten moving pictures in the story, "Couple Found Dead on Lonely Isle in the Pacific."

A man and woman, supposedly married, were found dead of starvation and thirst. She had lived longer, covered his dead face with a coat, died a little later. Baby clothes, but no baby, were found. On a nearby island there dwells a group of nudists, and there is the story of "a German baroness, with flashing eyes" that went to a third island with three gentlemen, of whom she is supposed to have shot one, after proclaiming herself empress of the island. She lives in "shorts." What more would you ask of romance?

The unfortunate man and woman found dead realized too late that civilization has its charms and its safety. Nudism with bare feet was the start. Clothing, automobile, airplane, etc., is an improvement. Rousseau's idea of primitive man and his happiness is bosh. Primitive man was never happy, always frightened, usually diseased and died young.

Also speaking of money, what it means and does not mean, observe that the unfortunate German professor and his wife, found dead on that chalk white island in the Pacific, had a considerable sum of money in French banknotes.

That money did them no good.

With all the banknotes, all the gold on earth piled up on that island, they would still have died of thirst and starvation.

Not money, but man's intelligent work contains value and wealth.

The French have a saying: On prend son bonheur ou on le trouve. "Each takes his happiness where he finds it." Some seek money, some praise and glory, some care nothing for the present, yearning to be remembered in centuries to come.

Professor Phillip J. Darlington, in charge of insects in Harvard museum of comparative zoology, climbed, at the risk of his neck, to the mount of Mount La Hotte, most dangerous peak in Haiti.

He climbed and crawled all the way up to look for one particuler beetle, missing in the Harvard collection, and it was worth climbing for 26 days, cutting his way through brush, where native climbers would not follow. He found up there the beetle he wanted, other beetles that could not fly, many queer insects.

To some that will seem a dull climb, but something has been added to men's knowledge, and ten thousand years hence, men will read about that solitary beetle climb up a dangerous mountain peak that have never heard of the charge of the Light Brigade, or even of Theodore Roosevelt going up San Juan Hill.

In French history you read of a conscientious cook who committed suicide when the fish

WEDS AFTER $50,000 LOVE SUIT

In a surprise sequel to love, divorce and suicide, Henry F. Jacques, young and wealthy Brookline realtor, married Mrs. Ruth Anthony, formerly of Brookline, in Portchester, N. Y., a week ago, it became known today.

Mrs. Anthony's first husband, Karl E. Anthony, wounded her and shot and killed himself in Brookline in 1930 because of unwarranted jealousy, police declared.

Jacques' first wife, Mrs. Louise P. Jacques, member of a prominent Brookline family, later sued Mrs. Anthony for $50,000, alleging alienation of affections, won a separate-support suit after telling of her husband's visits to Mrs. Anthony's apartments, but was divorced by him on charges of cruelty, at Las Vegas, Nev., last September.

The marriage of Jacques and Mrs. Anthony was performed by Justice of the Peace Edwin Thomas of Rye, N. Y., on Nov. 14. Mrs. Anthony is now a resident of Rye.

Jacques is 30; his second wife 37.

Anthony, who was 40 and a corset salesman, shot his wife three times, pushed her into the hallway of their apartment in Fuller street, Brookline, and then sent a bullet through his brain on July 16, 1930.

A month after the shooting Mrs. Jacques sued Mrs. Anthony for alleged alienation of Jacques' affection. Jacques was part owner of the apartment house where the tragedy happened.

Mrs. Jacques sued for separate support in 1932, and at a hearing of the action, which she won, it was testified that her husband was in Mrs. Anthony's company prior to the shooting, and afterwards.

'Lookit! An' I Got the Ring'

When the surgeons couldn't—why, a plumber did. He came right out of the City hospital basement with his set of tools, and he sawed an iron washer off the third finger of the right hand of four-year-old Mary Peters, above, of Perth street, Roxbury. Doctors and nurses had tried to get it off and failed. They had to give Mary ether, 'cause it hurt her so. But now she's smiling again—with the 'ring' as a souvenir. Girl Operated On by Plumber

A City Hospital plumber performed an "operation" today after doctors and nurses found themselves balked in the treatment of a four-year-old Roxbury girl.

Little Mary Peters was the patient. She was hurried to the hospital from her home in Perch street, Roxbury, after her father found her screaming in pain. A metal washer was jammed on the third finger of her right hand and the finger was swelling rapidly.

Miss Celia Cooney, in charge of night nurses, found herself unable to remove the washer. Three surgeons failed also.

A call was sent to the engineering department of the hospital and the plumber responded—without forgetting his tools. Ether was administered Mary and the plumber sawed one-sixteenth of an inch so the washer could be spread and then removed.

The girl's finger was bandaged and her father took her home. The father said the girl had picked up the washer in the house.

RICH WIDOW'S BODY FOUND IN MELROSE

After a search that lasted all night and this morning, the body of Mrs. Edna Davidson, 51, wealthy widow of a Boston heating contractor, was found in Ell pond, Melrose, this afternoon.

Mrs. Davidson was only two weeks out of Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, where she had undergone a serious operation.

She disappeared late yesterday after she had sent on an errand Miss Grace Gilmore, who occupied the Davidson estate with Mrs. Davidson as a companion since the death of the contractor.

Miss Gilmore told police today that her employer had sent her to Boston a short time after the family physician had called. Returning in the evening she found her employer had vanished, Miss Gilmore said.

Police had conducted a quiet search through the night with no success. A Boy Scout call had been sounded this afternoon and police were just preparing to drag Ell Pond when the body was discovered near the boathouse at that section of the pond known as "The Knoll."

The body was kept at the pond for examination by Dr. Roscoe D. Perley, medical examiner.

Mrs. Davidson was widely known in Melrose through her membership in many clubs and her activities in civic affairs. In addition to the estate left by her husband she was reputed tobe wealthy in her own right.

Alice Brady Kidnap "Mystery" Solved

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 20 (AP)—The disappearance of Alice Brady, stage and screen actress, was solved today by her maid, who calmly reported:

"Miss Brady is home, but indisposed."

The maid made her report to Warner Brothers studio, where Miss Brady failed to answer a 9 a. m. call yesterday. Miss Brady's employers turned her unexplained absence into a kidnaping plot, but the police department and the sheriff's office denied they had any such report.

PONZI FRIEND HELD IN BANK SWINDLE

Four years out of Massachusetts State Prison, Joseph B. Marsino, alleged wrecker of the First National Bank of Warren, was arrested today in Chicago with two other men in connection with a $54,000 bank theft.

Marsino, under the alias of Joseph Biata, is held with Otto Van Derck, ledger clerk at the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, and Abraham Karatz, former Minneapolis attorney, following a confession by Van Derck.

It was to "clear his conscience" and to start married life with a clean slate that Van Derck confessed the alleged swindle of which even the bank officials were unaware, according to police, and implicated Marsino, who was freed from prison here through the legal knowledge of Charles Ponzi.

Marsino served three years of a five-year sentence in Massachusetts state prison for the Warren

Mexican Trip Brings Death to Student

FRANCIS AHERN

WELCH TO GET CARNEY POST

Washington, Nov. 20—Guy P. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, said today he "probably would recommend Judge William M. Welch of Northampton, Mass., to be internal revenue collector in Massachusetts.

The collectorship in Massachusetts was made vacant by the appointment yesterday of Joseph P. Carney as head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation office in Boston.

"Welch is being considered and my guess is he will have my recommendation," Helvering said.

YOUTH SHOT TO DEATH WHILE ON VISIT

Francis Ahern, 19, of 52 Wyman terrace, Arlington, a Boston University student, was shot and killed in Mexico City last night, according to a telephone message received today by Arlington relatives from his uncle, Daniel F. Ahern, who was traveling with him.

The telephone call was received at 7:15 a. m., by Maurice Ahern of 20 Alton street, Arlington, from his brother Daniel. Details of the shooting could not be learned immediately.

The dead youth was the eldest of three children of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy C. Ahern.

He was a second year student at the Boston University College of Business Administration. He was granted permission of school authorities to be absent from school Nov. 13 to Nov. 23. He told the school officials he was going to Texas in connection with a court case.

His uncle, Daniel F. Ahern, is treasurer of the Lord & Spencer Inc., produce dealers in Faneuil Hall market. According to officials of the company, the elder Ahern was to be a government witness in the case and took his nephew with him for companionship.

The pair left Arlington on November 16.

The youth and his uncle were registered at the Hotel Ritz during their stay in Mexico City.

A telegram received last night by business associates of the elder Ahern declared that they had concluded their business in Laredo, had gone to Corpus Christi and then to Mexico City. They had spent one afternoon at a bullfight.

They planned to leave Mexico City and visit Laredo again before returning home. Their arrival home was planned for next Monday.

The telephone call was received by the youth's uncle Maurice, with whom Daniel makes his home. Maurice Ahern said:

"My brother was all upset when he called. He told me the boy was dead, but he was too upset to tell me any of the details. We are trying to get in touch with him again to learn more about the tragedy."

Young Ahern was graduated from Arlington High School in 1932.

During his freshman year at Boston University, Ahern was a member of the freshman football and hockey teams. He was active in the social activities of his class and was popular with his classmates.

Butler Bares Offer to Set Up Fascist Rule

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 20—Major-General Smedley Butler, retired ranking officer of the U. S. Marine Corps, was called before the House committee investigating un-American activities today to testify regarding reports that Butler was asked by a group of "wealthy New Yorkers to lead a Fascist movement to set up a dictatorship in the United States."

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 20—A published charge by Major-General Smedley Butler, former marine corps commandant, that he had been requested to set up a Fascist dictatorship in the United States with the backing of New York financiers, who offered him $3,000,000 to finance the move, was flatly denied today by Gerald P. McGuire of Grayson M-P. Murphy & Co.

McGuire was reported to have been named by Butler as one of the financiers who had asked him to raise a Fascist army of half a million men, march on Washington and seize control of the government by a coup d'etat.

McGuire hotly declared he had never approached Butler with a proposal to raise such a force, that he had never assured the ex-marine commandant that New York financiers had $3,000,000 ready to start organization of such an army and

'DEAD' ISIDORE FISCH LINKED IN LINDBERGH KIDNAPING HUNT

PASTOR-NEIGHBOR OFFERED CORRECT INFORMATION

Renewed investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping has developed a "Mystery Man" with a dual personality—Isidor Fisch, from whom Bruno Richard Hauptmann says he received the ransom money found in his possession. This is the second of a series of 10 articles by Lou Wedemar, who has worked on the story since the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

By LOU WEDEMAR

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

New York, Nov. 20—The Rev. Peter J. Birritella, neighbor of Isidor Fisch, furnished the only correct lead in the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, as was told yesterday. Mary Cerita, a dress operator, whom he says he had trained to be a trance medium, told Colonel Henry Breckinridge to expect a letter from the kidnapers—and it arrived next day.

More than that, she told him the baby was "on the heights above Hopewell"—an exact description of the spot on Mount Rose where the baby's body was found.

And she told that she saw the initials "J. F. C." in connection with the case long before Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon entered the ransom negotiations.

Unless the medium really got her facts from the "spirit world," these facts—and the fact that she mispronounced Breckinridge's name in the same manner as it was misspelled in the ransom letters—were a coincidence. And it was a coincidence that Isidor Fisch, mystery man of the case, lived across the street.

But when "Rev. Birritella" or "George," his assistant, is preaching, passersby frequently enter the Harlem Spiritualist shrine and listen. Birritella tells with relish of the time that "The Diamond Boys," gangsters, sat in pews on one side, listening to him, while detectives sat in the pews opposite, waiting to arrest them.

He is sure, however, that Isidor Fisch was never one of his listeners. He is also sure that Hauptmann never came in. Hauptmann was a frequent vistor of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hekel, who lived in the same house with Fisch—but not until four months later. So there seems no Hauptmann link.

Birritella and his medium got married a few months after the kidnaping. She gave up her work as medium, and now attends the chapel only on rare occasions.

TRIES TO FORGET CASE

Guarded by a big police dog, and attended by a maid, she lives in an apartment in another part of Harlem, and tries to forget the Lindbergh case. Birritella explains:

"We tried to help the Lindberghs, and it brought us only trouble. When we went down there we thought we would be taken to the Lindbergh residence, but they only let us go as far as Princeton. We had to pay our fares out of our own pockets, and afterwards the police arrested us for fortune-telling, of which we were not guilty, so they could get our fingerprints and handwriting.

"My wife got the information from the spirits—I don't know from what spirit. She could not have got the information from Isidor Fisch or anybody else; she got it from the spirits. She is a wonderful medium, but she won't go into a trance again for a million dollars."

If Isidor Fisch did not interest himself in the Harlem spiritualist chapel, a few doors from his home, it was unusual forbearance on his part, for he loved to "join things."

FISCH WAS JOINER

He was "sergeant-at-arms" of the Chrzanower Society, an organization of Galician Jews, and was the only German Jew among them. They respected and liked him, and resent any hint that he did anything wrong. He took care of the society's flags and ballot-box, and attended every meeting. They believed him poverty-stricken, but when they offered to let him off without payment of dues, he scornfully refused.

He was also a member of the Vienna Jewish Benevolent Society, an organization of Austrian Jews.

And he wore in his lapel a pin that friends believed marked him as a member of a Masonic organization, although a search of Masonic records did not disclose his name.

He had several casual friends among the members of these clubs, but no one knew him intimately. Between himself and those closest to him he drew a veil, and, as one said, it was as if he were "a man with two personalities."

Airtight Alibi Lined Up for Hauptmann

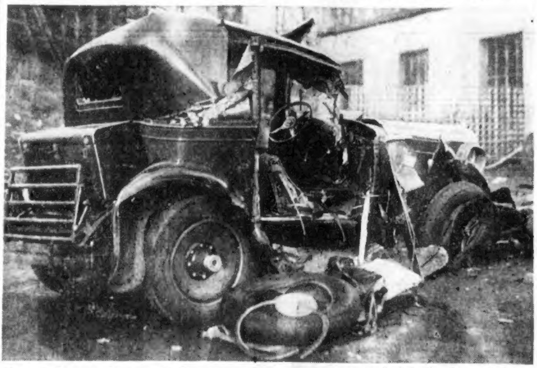
By International News Service

New York, Nov. 20—An airtight alibi, systematically evolved from the stories of more than a score of men and women, was in the course of preparation today by counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann awaiting trial Jan. 2 for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Not only willl Hauptmann be able to prove he was nowhere near the Lindbergh estate on the night of March 1, when the kidnaping took place, but he will also offer an alibi for the night when the ransom money was paid to Dr. John F. Condon in the Bronx cemetery, Attorney C. Lloyd Fisher announced.

(The unexplained mystery of the Lindbergh ransom money is analyzed in tomorrow's article about Isidor Fisch, the "Mystery Man").

Air Peril? How About This Land Crash?



Few airplane crackups result in more complete wreckage than this bloodstained tangle which is all that is left of an automobile in which three persons, one of them a veteran aviator, lost their lives today. The car skidded and hit a tree at Main and Hopkins streets, Reading. The bodies of two men and two women passengers had to be dragged from the death pile of twisted steel. George E. Lang of Reading and Edwin T. Kendall of North Reading were killed almost instantly. Mrs. Kendall died later in a hospital. Mrs. Flora Goodwin of Cambridge survived. THREE KILLED IN READING CRASH

A third death, at 8:45 o'clock this morning, left only one survivor of an automobile foursome that met disaster on the Reading-Stoneham turnpike in the former town early today.

Mrs. Edwin T. Kendall, 27, of Sanborn street, North Reading, died in Winchester hospital, six hours after the car in which she was riding with her husband and another couple, skidded, sideswiped a tree and overturned.

Instantly killed in the crash were her husband, Edwin T. Kendall, 41, an aviator, and George F. Lang, 72, of Prescott street, Reading, a realtor.

Mrs. Flora Goodwin, of Magazine street, Cambridge, is the survivor. She received first aid treatment at the scene, was taken home and later went to a hospital.

The four were riding towards Stoneham in Lang's car, the accident occurring just after the machine passed Hopkins street, Reading.

Mr. Lang was a veteran realtor in Middlesex County and a member of many real estate associations. He is survived by a son, Kenneth; two daughters, Mrs. Viola Miller and the former Mrs. Sylvia Johnson, who was divorced and is now living in Connecticut.

Aviator Kendall once figured in the news when he was connected with the trial of J. Morgan Corbett of Boston for beating James D. Quinn, Jr., aviator and plane mechanic, in New York.

WOMAN BARES ALLEY BEATING

Found in an alley off Tremont street today semi-conscious, Miss Mary Moran, 35, of Riverway, Roxbury, later told police that three men in an automobile had attempted to attack her.

She was found by Patrolmen Edward Butler and Edward Nolan of Division 10, as they were cruising past 1224-26 Tremont street in a radio patrol car.

They took her to City Hospital, where she was treated for cuts and bruises of the arms, legs and body.

that he had not offered Butler $18,000 to deliver a speech favoring a return of the United States to the gold standard before the American Legion convention in Chicago.

McGuire was apparently astounded to hear Butler's reported charge that he (McGuire) had said:

"We might even go along with Roosevelt and do with him what Mussolini did with the King of Italy."

McGuire flatly denied making such a statement and further asserted that he had not gone to Europe last summer as General Butler was said to have alleged, and spent $25,000 in study and analysis of Nazi and Fascist organizations in Germany and Italy.

Rep. Samuel Dickstein, chairman of the congressional committee investigating un-American activities in the United States, said an executive session of the committee is being held today at New York to consider this so-called Fascist movement.

"There is much more to this story than that which has leaked out," he said.

Rum Gangs Plan Drive As U.S. Cuts Dry Force

Smugglers, bootleggers and other purveyors of illicit liquor are preparing for a cleanup beginning December 1, the Boston Evening American learned today, as the result of a rider on the revenue enforcement appropriations bill for 1935.

Under this rider, more than 80 per cent of the present force of agents working under the New England Tax Enforcement Unit, will be dropped, stripping the land forces down to the bone and opening the way for wide-open run running on the eve of the Christmas holiday season.

Less than 25 trained field agents will be left under Robert W. Coyne, chief enforcement officer, to cover the entire New England area, as a result of the rider which requires the dropping of all agents not under civil service.

Letters of protest have already started to deluge Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, who formed the Federal Co-ordination Bureau, of which Captain Cecil M. Gavitt is head.

Through the pooling of strength by the customs department, the treasury agents, narcotic forces and the tax enforcement unit, nine major raids, from Eastport, Me., to Athol on the west and Bourne on Cape Cod, have netted the government approximately $1,000,000 through seizure of alcohol, stills, trucks and other equipment and property.

The seizures have been made possible through co-operation of the tax enforcement unit under Coyne and the treasury department units under Thomas Finnegan and Owen McKenna.

Now, through the appropriations rider, the smugglers and runners are expected to flood New England with illicit and tax-dodging liquor —mainly alcohol.

The rider was slipped into the bill, according to federal officials here, by United States Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, after 20 of his favored appointees failed in his state because they could not meet the civil service requirements.

His rider made a provision that all agents in the enforcement units be under civil service on and after December 1, no matter how long or how successful they had been in their posts.

U. S. MOVES FOR 'BOTTLING UP' ARMS TRADE

By Associated Press

Geneva, Nov. 20—A bold attempt to bottle up the arms trade, from revolvers to battleships, was made today by the United States in sweeping proposals laid before the steering committee of the world disarmament conference.

Power to investigate arms manufacture and trade of any country signing a convention for a rigid license system and full publicity for all arms orders were provided in the most complete munitions document placed here in almost three years of disarmament argument.

WILSON'S PROPOSALS

A permanent disarmament commission would be created at Geneva under the plan advanced by Hugh R. Wilson, American minister to Switzerland, on behalf of his government.

The commission would be given automotic powers to investigate private or public manufacture and sale of arms and to keep the world regularly informed as to what is going on behind the scenes.

All arms—rifles, machine-guns, torpedoes, mines, warships, airplanes and ammunition—come within the scope of the American proposal.

ARMS PACT URGED

Wilson declared in an address to the opening disarmament session:

"The treaty would tend to lessen between states that constantly increasing fear of the unknown—a fear which is one of the most profound causes of anxiety and distrust between nations.

"I will go even further and state the adoption of such a text would greatly facilitate the eventual adoption of a general disarmament convention.

"The United States firmly believes that without disarmament there is no sound basis for peace. It has never wavered from that conviction and it will work earnestly for the final success of this conference."

Japanese Launch New Cruiser for Emperor

By Associated Press

Yokosuka, Japan, Nov. 20—Japan's new 8500-ton cruiser Suzuya was launched today in the presence of Emperor Hirohito and 125,000 other persons thronging the naval basin and surrounding hills.

Warships of the battle fleet lying in the harbor formed a colorful backdrop.

Simultaneously at Kure, the navy's other principal shipyard, the keel of a 10,000-ton aircraft carrier was laid. It is the first of two such projected vessels, to be completed in 1937 and 1938, at an estimated cost of approximately $12,200,000 each.

What Makes Boys Go Wrong? Model Youth Puzzles Uxbridge

By WIN BROOKS

Uxbridge, Nov. 20—In a heartbroken household that will never fully comprehend, Mrs. Marion Alton collapsed today as the 20-year-old son she reared in "the perfect environment" went to prison for life in California—a confessed kidnaper, gunman, thief.

The doors of the Alton home were closed, even to the intimate friends who sought to console her.

George G. Alton

All but a broken man, but still a loyal dad, Ralph H. Alton, local executive of a Worcester utilities company, said a last, dazed goodbye at the gate of California's prison to the son who had given promise of fulfilling the dreams that fathers always dream.

He is starting home to be with the woman who shared the dream.

And the town so used to saying of George Gilbert Alton—"Now, there's a boy with a future"—is trying in vain to understand what happened to its "model youth" that, in five months, he should be transformed from an exemplary boy, whose life was a pattern for the neighborhood children, to a tough gunman whose only future is close confinement behind steel bars for the rest of his natural life.

What DID happen?

Probably the psychologists who took a hand in the Loeb-Leopold case, and the derelictions of Abraham Faber will attempt to say, but it is doubtful that George Gilbert Alton himself could really explain, if he would.

Certainly this residential and picturesque suburb of Worcester, which watched George Alton's progress through childhood and adolescence, into promising young manhood, doesn't know the "why."

For George Alton's background is one to confound the criminologists, who claim that good citizenship and bad is wholly a question of youthful environment.

Bad citizenship was never spawned in a better environment than that in which George Alton was reared and protected during all except the last five months.

BRILLIANT STUDENT

His father is one of the town's most prominent men, one of those conservative, substantial business men, past president of Rotary, that are typical of New England small communities.

His mother is the typical wife of the town leader, interested in clubs and charities, prominent in church affairs.

The Alton home is the typical New England town residence of families of affairs, not luxurious, but comfortable, wanting nothing.

George Alton was a brilliant student in the local primary and high schools, well-behaved, well-mannered, respectful of his elders.

He was the best of the local Boy Scout troop, winning highest honors, decorated an "eagle" scout, doing more than his one good deed a day.

He prepared for college at Worcester Academy, graduating last June at the head of his class. He was to have entered University of Maine this fall to continue his study of engineering.

ATTITUDE CHANGES

"You wouldn't catch George Alton doing anything like that..."

"Why don't you act like George Alton..."

"George Alton doesn't associate with those boys..."

Parental advice like that was common in Uxbridge for more than 10 years.

But parents who would now point another example from George Alton's life will have a task putting their fingers on what was responsible for George Alton's transformation into one of those characters mothers sometimes whisper about to their children when they want to impress upon them the consequences of bad behavior... "You watch out or you'll end up like George Alton..."

The change started in June when George Alton got a summer job delivering automobiles in the West for a big car manufacturing company.

"There's a boy with a future ... He doesn't have to work but look at him ... That's the way to keep out of mischief ..."

Uxbridge had its first shock in August. Police here received word that a boy named George Alton had been arrested in St. Joseph, Mo., with a girl in a car allegedly stolen—a car that was to have been delivered to Bing Crosby, crooning motion picture star.

"Of course," said the town, indignant, 'that's a silly mistake. It couldn't be George Alton."

The very idea was a blow to town pride.

BREAKS FOR FREEDOM

There wasn't any mistake and George Alton went to jail in St. Joseph, the police alleging he had been stealing cars and committing holdups in several mid-western cities. The girl was Grace Darling, who said her home was Hollywood.

Also, the police said, George had tried to shoot his way to freedom after his arrest.

"George Alton?" said Uxbridge. "It couldn't be!"

And it was still George Alton who, a few weeks later, in company with Bernard Tuggle, one of his escape companions, kidnaped and robbed Louis Roux, Bakersfield, Cal., sports goods store proprietor.

And it really was George Alton, recaptured, who had four pistols, one in a shoulder holster, and a complete arsenal in his room, in Bakersfield.

And it was George Alton, Uxbridge's model boy, who yesterday in California pleaded guilty to kidnaping and robbery and was sentenced to prison for life.

The town realizes it now but nobody understands it.

'Sun Bomb' Stirs Science Studies

Alcohol, Too

LENGTH OF LIFE, BLOOD AND AIR DISCUSSED

Cleveland, Nov. 20—That famous scientific organization — the National Academy of Science—created three-quarters of a century ago by Abraham Lincoln, turned its attention today to highly technical subjects.

Blood plasma, alcohol intoxication, temperature of air, rate of growth and length of life—these and many other subjects occupied thes cientific authorities today on the second day's progra mof the academy's fall meeting here.

One of the outstanding addresses of the meeting was that delivered last night by Dr. Harlow Shapely, director of the Harvard College observatory, who disclosed the existence of a huge twin sun with a total eclipse lasting 30 days.

Dr. Shapley also disclosed the discovery of 1700 variable stars and the presence of a group of super-stars, each one more than 10,000 times brighter than the sun.

Announcement that the big dipper is breaking up and will be unrecognizable in 50,000 years was made by Dr. J. J. Nassau, of Case School, and the first motion pictures ever taken of an exploding "solar bomb," a mass hydrogen gas thrown out of a sunspot, were presented by Dr. Robert R. McMath of the University of Michigan.

In a paper prepared by Dr. William Bowie of the United States Coast Guard and Geddic Survey and read last night, it was declared that the "mapping" of the United States will be completed in four years. The "map" will show any disturbances of the earth's surface, and is the first such project ever undertaken. Later, it was said, the whole continent of North America will be similarly "mapped."

The scientific session today dealt largely with medical science. A subscription dinner will be held tonight, at which the Mark Clark Thompson medal awarded for important services to geology and paleontology will be presented to Charles Schuchert of Yale.

Happiness Dream of Prince to End

PRINCE ASTURIAS COUNTESS CAVADONGA

Paris, Nov. 20—The dream of happiness which the Spanish Prince of Asturias expected 17 months ago when he took Senorita Edelmira Sampedro Robata, a commoner and daughter of a wealthy Cuban merchant, as his bride, is apparently at an end.

The Countess Cavadonga, who also had a dream of someday being a figure in Spanish life, is now on her way to her parents' home in Havana. Thus a royal romance which started out with great promise has been quickly extinguished.

The Prince, who renounced his claims to the Spanish throne to take the Cuban beauty as his bride, remains alone here without any prospect of a reconciliation.

Friends of the Countess say that she will seek a divorce in Havana as soon as she has established a legal residence again in that city.

The marriage of the couple in June, 1933, climaxed a story book romance which began in 1932 when the Prince met the Cuban girl in a sanatarium where he was undergoing treatments.

Heiress-Count

London, Nov. 20—The engagement was announced today of Lady Moira Forbes, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Granard, to the French Count Louis De Brantes, a prominent member of society. The Countess Granard is a daughter of the late Ogden Mills, under whose will she inherited ten million dollars.

The marriage of this heiress who is only 24 will take place December 20 in the castle of the bride's family at Longford, Irish Free State.

King George Sends $25 to Mrs. Dionne

By Universal Service

Callander, Ont., Nov. 20—King George of Great Britain cheered the heart of Mrs. Olivia Dionne, mother of the famous quintuplets, by sending her a check for five pounds.

The contribution represented "The King's bounty for multiple births."

It was learned the check was forwarded to Mrs. Dionne from the Department of External Affairs in Ottawa and that King George had directed the money be sent with application.

It is the practice of His Majesty to direct that three pounds be sent to families anywhere in the British Empire into which triplets are born. But this time it was quintuplets.

In this instance, however, the king waived the practice of requiring an application before the money was forwarded, and caused it to be sent on his own initiative. Also, it was $25 instead of the customary $15.

More Scandal in New 'Gloria Case'

Mother Tells of Wild Parties

FIGHTS DAUGHTER FOR CUSTODY OF LITTLE CONSTANCE BROCK

By International News Service

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 20—Nine-year-old Constance Brock was to take the witness stand today as did 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt in the sensational Vanderbilt-Whitney case in New York City and tell a referee with whom she desires to make her home.

Constance is the storm center in a furious battle between her twice-married mother, Mrs. Helen Starr Josephson, and her wealthy grandmother, Mrs. Libby Starr, with whom she has been living, for her permanent guardianship.

The mother is expected to follow the child to the stand and make denial of charges by Mrs. Starr that she is addicted to excessive drinking and likes weekend parties that start on Thursday and end the following Wednesday.

Mrs. Josephson has already characterized as preposterious her mother's statement that she once planned to go on a ten-day cruise with a man before she married Josephson, an investment broker. Her first husband, father of Constance, was a movie executive.

But it was the reciting of the ugly epithets, hurled at her by Helen, amid Park avenue, and swanky Mamaroneck settings, which caused the old mother's breakdown.

"You must tell me those names you were called," Referee oseph Morschauser ordered her, shortly before the close of the morning session of the hearing.

"My heart won't let me. I am her mother," protested Mrs. Starr.

Then she burst into uncontrollable weeping, and the session was adjourned.

Before the afternoonn session began, she had gained her composure and had found a means of apprising the referee of the words and yet of sparing herself uttering them.

The elast offensive of the list of epithets and remarks was read into the court records by her attorney:

"You are o low-lifer . . . I hope both you and he (Mrs. Josephson's father, Samuel Starr) drop dead some day . . . You old witch, what are you going to do with your money when you die?"

The list entered, Mrs. Starr continued her testimony:

"Always when Helen was at home, she called me an old witch. It was usually when she thought I was preventing her father from giving her money."

Mrs. Josephson and her husband stared coldly at the dignified, gray-haired old woman as she spoke, with a slight German accent.

"Most of the time when she talked to me this way," Mrs. Starr went on, "the baby was present. Once, Connie after one of these scenes turned to me and said: 'I will never leave you, Granny. I love you.' And then turned to her mother and told her: 'I'll never love you. You call Granny such bade names.'

"I wanted to curtail Helen's expenses.

"Once she showed me two tickets for a 10-day cruise to Bermuda. She said a man was going with her.

"I told her if her father and brother knew they wouldn't let her stay in the housea minute."

Referee Morschauer asked her to name the man.

After a conference among the attorneys it was learned Helen did not take the trip and the man was spared the publicity.

Princess Marina Fad New Hairdress on Way

STRAIGHT BACK WITH SWEEP ENDING UP IN GRADED CURLS

By International News Service

Paris, Nov. 20 — A new fad in women's hair-dressing is about to flash around the world.

This was the confident prediction made to International News Service today by the modest Paris coiffeur who is to do the hair of Princess Marina of Greece for her wedding to Great Britain's Duke of Kent this month.

He expects the Marina coiffure will be copied widely throughout the world.

"So popular a bride," he said, "and such a simple hair dress, effective and charmingly suitable to any type of face, certainly will make the new fad. The simple style should make every woman attractive.

"The Princess takes her hair straight back off the forehead in a narrow semi-circular sweep over the right side of her head, where it ends in clusters of close-fitting, beautifully graded curls. The top of the head is smooth, with only the suggestion of a wave."

History bears out the possibility that the world can copy distinctive head dress. Madame Pompadour startled France by piling her hair high on the top of her head, and this bit of fashion soon was followed by the social elite.

Long before this, Joan of Arc had her hair brushed down and cut in a straight line over her eyebrows. In the back it was cut horizontally. This style, the forerunner of the modern bob, still is followed for many children.

One Paris coiffeur credits Irene Castle, American dancer, with popularization of short hair in the present age, both in America and in Europe.

REV. COUGHLIN 'UNION' TO BE DIRECT LOBBY

By Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 20—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin asserted flatly at a press conference this morning that his National Union for Social Justice which, he said, now has "well over 100,000 members," will be "a direct, up and above-board lobby" in Washington.

He said the Union had drawn members from every state, that 29 mail sacks, each containing 4,000 letters, were received at the Shrine of the Little Flower last week, and that he expected the membership to reach 5,000,000.

By the time Congress convenes, he said, the membership will have been segregated by congressional districts. The union's lobbyists, he said, will approach individual members of Congress and say "We want this and here are the names of the persons who support this program."

Father Coughlin also disclosed that he and Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Oklahoma), a leading inflationist, conferred yesterday with Henry Ford, but declined to say what was the outcome of that discussion.

He said that his discussion with Senator Thomas of the monetary problems would continue today and that he and Thomas would leave tomorrow for Washington. Father Coughlin and Senator Thomas announced last night they would work for "further expansion of the currency" and for ultimate stabilization of the dollar at 100 cents, which they said was the 1926 level.

They plan a meeting in Washington next month of representatives of farm organizations, the Committee for the Nation, the Sound Money League and the National Union for Social Justice, for preparation of a program to be submitted to President Roosevelt.

Father Coughlin said that the national administration had "consistently refused" to face the monetary question and that there is nine billion dollars in gold and silver in the United States treasury that has not been "used to aid recovery."

Father Coughlin said that "James Cromwell, son of the J. P. Morgan partner, gives me the dope on the bankers," and that Upton Sinclair visited him before the recent election in California, but that he withheld support for the "EPIC" plan "because I couldn't find out what his program was."

was bad, or failed to arrive on time. That happened centuries ago.

Today a police official in Japan attempts to commit suicide because he shared responsibility for a blunder that caused the Japanese Mikado to make an unnecessary detour in a formal procession. He did not want to live, for his mistake meant disgrace extending to his wife, five children, and all class relations.

Because of this little "detour" incident, which would only bring a good-natured smile to the face of a British king or American president, it is suggested Japan's home minister will probably resign.

They take their Mikados seriously in Japan, and that is one reason why they fight hard for him and believe nothing impossible with "the virtue of the Mikado" back of it.

They are wrong about the "impossible."

From Nice comes gossip about dissatisfaction in Italy, because of bad business and trade conditions, and a story that Balbo, the Italian flier with the impressive short beard, is "challenging the power of Mussolini."

If this be true, the wise would rather NOT be Balbo. "Challenging the power of Mussolini" is a good deal like undertaking to swim Niagara Rapids. You always go through, once you start, but you are not easily recognized at the lower end.

In Texas, at Gladewater, a fine oil well is blowing and spouting, in the center of the Roosevelt cemetery, one mile outside the town. Tall pine trees rise near the graves, but the spouting oil rises higher. If ghosts of the dead could rise, and sit on their tombstones at midnight, as they did in Robert Burns' poem, that well would surprise them. Still more would they be surprised to learn that oil thus spouting was created tens of millions of years ago, by tiny creatures that once lived in the ocean on or near the spot where the graves now stand.

Huh, Guess Old Spot Knows His Way Home

When little Joan Myette, two and a half years old, strayed away, somehow, from her Winthrop avenue, Revere, home, right along behind her trailed good old Spot. Of course, like any good sensible dog, Spot, you'd better bet, wasn't lost at all. But he couldn't talk to tell Joan. Nor could he tell a woman passer-by, who took the child to a police station. But he could tell the "cops." He just up and showed them his license tag. It was easy then. Here are Joan, still a little scary, and Spot, who's pleased with himself—with reason. MARSINO HELD IN SWINDLE

Bank looting before Ponzi's study of the statutes and his making out of legal briefs in his own cell had secured Marsino's release on the grounds of double jeopardy.

Although Ponzi was able thus to serve the friend he had made in jail, he was unable to secure his own freedom on the same grounds, nor was he able to prevent his deportation to Italy.

SERVED PREVIOUS TERMS

Both men had served previous terms under federal court convictions for their alleged crimes.

To the Boston Evening American, while he was awaiting action on deportation proceedings against him, Ponzi revealed the work he had done for Marsino.

"I was serving my second sentence for the same offense," said Ponzi, "when Marsino arrived at the Massachusetts State Prison.

"I had tried in vain to bring the points at law in my own case to the attention of the authorities and effect my own release. Soon after Marsino's arrival I struck up a chance acquaintance with him and learned his story.

PREPARED BRIEFS

"Because of the prejudice exhibited against me in many official places, I set about to prepare Marsino's defense against double jeopardy. Having had considerable research experience in the law in my own trouble, I had prepared, within a short time, four briefs dealing with Marsino's case and the law.

"With the aid of a young attorney, Peter Maggio of Everett, we filed our first brief in the Federal Court, and the result was that in a short time Marsino was freed and within a year had re-established himself in his home city of Chicago and had become one of the most successful hairdressers in that city."

That was in 1930, but today Marsino was back in the toils again in Chicago with the conscience-stricken bank clerk, Van Derck, and the former Minneapolis attorney, Karatz.

Lieutenant Charles Welling and assistant State's Attorney Vernon Thompson said Van Derck told them that he had realized only $200 from a scheme to defraud the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, but that $54,000 was taken.

MARSINO ADMITS PLOT

He said Marsino maintained a small balance in an account at the bank, but wrote checks for large amounts, of which Van Derck took charge, manipulating the records accordingly.

He said the bank examiners had not noticed the irregularities.

Marsino, who was taken into custody, corroborated the clerk's story, police said, and implicated Karatz as the ringleader of the plot.

Joseph B. Marsino, shown here as he was leaving court in Boston while waging an unsuccessful fight against a state prison sentence for larceny of funds from the Warren National Bank, is again under arrest for a similar offense—this time at Chicago.

Karatz also was taken to the station for questioning.

Marsino claimed to own an interest in a saloon operated by Dave Barry, prize fight referee who gained national attention in his famed "long count" in the world's heavyweight match between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney in Soldier's Field several years ago.

Marsino said the money obtained went to finance two world's fair concessions, a saloon, and a partial payment on a controlling interest in a life insurance company with headquarters in Springfield, Ill.

Marsino formerly operated a chain of barber shops, rising to some financial heights when he took over a string of small banks and corporations. He was convicted in 1924 of wrecking the First National Bank of Warren, Mass., and sentenced to Atlanta.

Van Derck told the police he was to be married Thanksgiving evening, but had brooded over his connection with the alleged scheme and decided to start with a "clean slae."

Marsino said a $25,000 payment with the allegedly embezzled funds had been made on a $400,000 interest in the insurance company, and that another draft for $25,000 was to have been made today.

All three alleged swindlers were held without charge pending further developments.

GALA FETE FOR CURLEY

Friends and associates of Governor-elect James M. Curley today planned a reception on his homecoming for his 60th birthday anniversary celebration that will equal and may exceed the warmth of the spontaneous reception accorded him two years ago.

Like that other occasion when Mr. Curley was returning from the west after a campaign for Franklin D. Roosevelt, the reception on the governor-elect's return from his southern vacation will be informal.

From early reports, the governor-elect is due at 4 p. m. He arrived in New York from Washington last night and stayed overnight.

Governor-elect Curley cut short his southern stay to come home for his birthday party. He hadn't planned that either, but the desire to be back in Boston was too strong to withstand.

The birthday celebration is to be of an informal nature, too. A dinner at the Curley home in the Jamaicaway is planned with only close friends and associates attending.

Governor-elect Curley brings new laurels back with him. His $130,000,000 relief and housing program had left the capital with "something to think about," according to Washington dispatches.

2 Withdraw From Revere Mayor Race

In the middle of the fight for mayor of Revere, John M. Lisst, chairman of assessors, and George E. Lund, president of the City Council, today withdrew their names as candidates, leaving just four men to participate in the first non-partisan primary in the city's history on December 4th.

Mayor Andrew A. Casassa will be closely pressed in the fight by City Treasurer James M. O'Brien, Representative Thomas F. Carroll and former State Senator Conde J. Brodbine.

RACE BOARD O.K. SEEN BY O'HARA

Crooker and William H. Gardner, representatives of the 8000 who signed the original racing referendum petition.

"We have too much faith in the Governor's Council of Massachusetts to believe in such a statement," said Crooker for himself and Gardner. "We have too much to believe it, particularly with a request before the council, signed by 8000 persons, asking for a public hearing."

City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park, declared that Boston is entitled to its own horse racing track, as the war in connection with Massachusetts' new game waged on.

Norton issued the following statement:

"Seventy-five per cent of the money spent at Rockingham Park, New Hampshire and Narragansett, Rhode Island, on the horse-races, comes from Boston, then why should not Boston have one of the two race-tracks in Massachusetts? Why not keep the money right here in Boston? It is Boston money.

"In Boston we already have one of the finest mile race tracks in America, the track at Readville. The big cost in building a track is the initial cost of the land. Here is a track that, with a small expenditure it is ready to go again.

I believe that the governor sould consider the matter of requesting a committee to act in an advisory capacity on this whole matter.

"On that committee, which should be kept small in number, should be the governor, the mayor of Boston, the president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, the chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, Cardinal O'Connell, Bishop Lawrence and Rabbi Levi. Whatever this committee advises the public will have the utmost confidence in.

WARNS OF FALSE START

"Let's not hurry on such an important matter. We can have no racing in Massachusetts until next spring. A false start will ruin the whole idea and the public will lose confidence.

"I favor racing in Massachusetts being run so that the people will get the greatest benefit—for charity. To do this, say 20 public spirited citizens would have to produce $50,000 each. In some way these citizens would have to be protected in their investment. This would be a matter for the above-mentioned committee to consider.

"If this plan proves impractical, then the next hope would seem to be a limited dividend corporation where those who invested their money in the track would receive certain dividends and the public would be protected from 'watered stock' and enormous profits being made by a few insiders.

The matter has received such publicity and is so controversial that a committee made up of individuals such as suggested, who would report their opinions to the public, would go far toward allaying public fear that racketeers were to gain control of this lucrative business.

"To allow any company to sell stock and appoint high-salaried officials 'to milk' the 49 per cent of those who put up the cash, the stockholders, is merely to revert to the old racketeering conditions."

In line with Governor-elect Curley's sentiments, the Boston city council was on record today as opposing professional promoters invading Massachusetts.

The council passed three orders, each aimed at removing the foreign invasion possibility.

Patrolman Ablaze Saves 9 on Barges

New York, Nov. 20 (AP)—His uniform ablaze, a patrolman plunged through a wall of flames today and rescued nine persons as they slept aboard three coal barges.

The rescuer was Patrolman William Parsons, 31, who collapsed as the barge occupants rowed to safety after his warning. The fire crackled across the entrance of a 300-foot pier at Mariners Harbor, S. I., and had reached the sterns of the three barges when Parsons rushed to the rescue.

Prepared Against 'Rainy Day'

And this umbrella came in handy, Mary Zonn discovered, when her apartment on Seaver street, Roxbury, was flooded by water which was being poured into upstairs floors by firemen fighting a blaze in the building's third story. It looks as if rubber boots and a suit of oilskins wouldn't be amiss. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

DOCTOR SAVES PATIENT IN FIRE

From his drenched and smoke-filled office at 20 Seaver street, Roxbury, Dr. Morris Kaplan was forced to carry a man patient to safety today while half a dozen occupants of other apartments were forced to flee.

The fire, which called apparatus on two alarms, started in an unoccupied suite on the third floor of the four-story building.

Dr. Kaplan was examining his patient in his first floor office while firemen dashed by his door. The doctor held off as long as he could and then carried his patient to an adjoining building.

Others who fled were the family of Israel Sushman on the first floor, Louis Zonn and Mrs. Jennie Goodman on the second floor.

Woman Driver in Collapse, Injured

Miss Charlotte T. Ward, 27, of Plymouth, who became faint while driving her automobile near MacCormack square, in East Boston, and lost control of the machine, is in critical condition at City Hospital.

Her car crashed into a parked automobile, climbed the curbstone, and careened into a house.

RUSSELL WILL NAME CHIEF

A new chief of police is expected to be named today by Mayor Richard Russell to succeed retiring Chief John J. McBride of Cambridge.

It is believed that the mayor, just back from a week-end in Washington, will submit the name of one of three police captains, Timothy F. Leahy, John J. Canney and Joseph J. Donahue, to the city council.

He also will submit the order with his approval granting the request of Chief McBride for retirement after 50 years service.

KIDNAP LINKED TO UNDERWORLD

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 20—J. Edgar Hoover, investigative chief of the Department of Justice, today assumed personal charge of the investigation into the disappearance of William Weiss, Philadelphia night life figure.

The department said it was first informed of the disappearance last night although Weiss vanished from his accustomed haunts on October 26. Ransom of $100,000 has been demanded.

The case appears to government men as one involving the underworld.

Weiss vanished from sight after leaving home for his office in downtown Philadelphia on the morning of October 26, the Federal agents learned, and notes demanding $100,000 ransom from his family followed.

Where he was kidnaped is a mystery, R. George Harvey, head of the Philadelphia Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, said today after a full night of work on the case.

Felix Rackemann Will Is Probated

The will of Felix Rackemann of Milton, Boston attorney who died last week, was filed today in Dedham Probate Court. Rackemann left to his partner, Harrison M. Davis, his share in the law business.

To his secretary, Miss Fillmore, he bequeathed $1000. Two other employes, Frank E. Beales and Neil McLeod, were remembered with $500 each. The residue of the estate which is estimated to be worth a half a million dollars goes to his wife.

3 Mystery Fires in Winthrop Probed

Three Winthrop fires of mysterious origin were ordered under investigation of the state fire marshal today.

Two of them were in an apartment block in Fawn Bar avenue, unoccupied for several months. The third was about a mile away in a vacant cottage in Shirley avenue.

RICHBERG ASKS FOUR MILLION JOBS FOR IDLE

By Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 20—Either private enterprise or further expansion of governmental activities must be utilized at once to provide re-employment for from four to five million workers, Donald R. Richberg, President Roosevelt's recovery chieftain, believes.

The recovery leader, addressing industrial and business leaders of the southeast last night, cited the vast need of better housing as one way of advancing recovery. At the same time he decried "another orgy of inflation" as the worst possible of all "quack remedies" offered the nation.

The southeastern leaders previously had heard Governor Joseph B, Ely of Massachusetts, who has voiced his opposition to President Roosevelt's program, call upon the nation's businessmen to fall into step with Roosevelt's recovery plan.

"I was at first astounded that the American people were willing for the government to take over matters hitherto privately controlled," Governor Ely said. "Yet I think that time has shown us there was some justification in doing something to stem the tide of radicalism."

INSULL CALLED FRAUD BOSS

By Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP)—Prosecutor Forrest A. Harness told the Insull mail fraud jury today that Samuel Insull and his aides wrote fictitious profits on the books of their investment companies in a deliberate plan to deceive the public.

"They inflated a $10 stock dividend to $516.28," Harness declared.

"If that isn't dishonest and fraudulent practice, nobody ever heard of it. They know the result would be to deceive the public. Insull had his mind made up to do it, notwithstanding the fact that his auditors told him it was not proper.

"He overruled them, and they yielded, in a complete about-face, to the will of the master."

Harness, making the government's closing argument in the mail fraud case, hammered a charge that Insull and a 1929 "preferred list" made fat profits at the expense of the Insull concern in which stockholders lost $100,000,000.

Evicted Trio Saved From State Home

Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Harrel Parmelee, who recently were evicted from their home in Aspinwall road, North Weymouth, were saved from being adjudged state wards today by appearance of a Quincy woman in Quincy court.

The children, Lloya, 13; Hope, 9, and Roger, 7, were placed through agreement of Judge Kenneth Johnson in the home of Mrs. Tina Coffin, of Brockton avenue, Quincy, where the parents took refuge after eviction. Mrs. Coffin has been a friend of the Parmelee couple for several years.

Judge Johnson first made a formal finding of guilty against the children, who were charged with being "neglected children." He then turned them over to Mrs. Coffin on a continuance until next June.

The latter move was decided upon when Parmalee told the court that he expected to move to New York state and obtain employment there.

WINES EXPERT IN TALK HERE

Americans—as far as fine wines are concerned—are like small children who are struggling with the A B C's, members of the Retail Bottle Luncheon Club were told today at a luncheon in Hotel Essex.

The speaker was Harold J. Crossman of the Jules, Wiles Sons & Co. of New York, an expert on wines and head of the national educational committee of Wines.

Scores of wine dealers flung questions at Grossman after his talk as guest speaker. He replied in informative answers that gave the questioners an insight into their own business.

Among other speakers introduced by Harry Crowley were William Mason, Boston representative of Jules Wiles Sons & Co.; Fred Curtin, W. F. Martin, J. Goddard Paige, William Spottiswood, William Shannon and Parker Shannon, all members of the Massachusetts Retail Liquor Package Stores Association.

Wheeler to Fight for 16-to-1 Silver

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—The split within the Senate silver bloc was emphasized anew today by a statement from Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) that he would re-introduce and continue his fight for his bill to authorize the free coinage of silver at a ratio of not more than 16 to 1 with gold.

Jobless Father of Nine Makes Appeal for Aid

Most of the appeals for assistance that come to the Boston American are from worried mothers but here is one from a father of nine children who is out of work.

He is unable to look for employment because he has not, he says, proper clothing to go out on the street.

He would like a suit size 36 and underwear size 38.

We have a request for a couple of pairs of curtains. The same party asks for shoes size 4½ for a girl of 11 who is now wearing shoes lined with newspaper. The girl is in delicate health, the letter says. The child wears size 14 clothing.

The girl's brother wears trousers size 15 and shoes size 5 and needs both.

We have another case of a child two, who is beginning to walk and needs shoes.

The mother would be obliged if someone would come forward with clothing for the youngster and his 10-months-old brother.

Star Rum Raider Under Charges

New York, Nov. 20 (AP)—John H. McGill, deputy surveyor who directed squads that seized millions of dollars worth of smuggled liquor in the prohibition era, has been suspended by Harry Foley, surveyor of the port. McGill will be required to show cause why he should not be dismissed from the customs service. The charges were not disclosed.

EDNA PURVIANCE, FORMER CHAPLIN LEADING LADY, PLANS COMEBACK

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

For the first time in several seasons of the theater, Boston will have three shows opening the same night, when "Bring On the Girls," comes to the Plymouth; "So Many Paths" to the Majestic, and "Her Master's Voice" at the Hollis, Monday. The first two are playing here prior to showings in New York. "Her Master's Voice," with Blanche Ring, in the leading role, was a New York success last season.

* * *

It was interesting to read in Colonel Dave Egan's interview with Warden Lawes of Sing Sing that Jack Benny is the prisoners' favorite radio comedian. Mr. Benny's popularity is very great, of course, on "the outside" also. But it is a tremendous tribute to the star that the caged population of the Ossining institution "roar with laughter" when Mr. Benny performs on the air. He has been cast by Sam H. Harris in the chief role of "Bring On the Girls," a new farce by the authors of "Of Thee I Sing," George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind. This was considered a daring bit of casting along Broadway, but Mr. Harris is a daring producer, and the authors of "Of Thee I Sing" departed far from musical-comedy formula when they wrote that famous satire.

* * *

Unless one or the other is postponed, two important new dramas will open Monday, December 10, in Boston. One is Ina Claire in "Ode to Liberty," and the second is the Theater Guild's production of S. N. Behrman's new play, "Rain from Heaven." The playwrights are "looking up" for titles, it appears. "Heaven," "Stars" and "Sky" are among the words used in the names of shows headed this way before Broadway.

* * *

A charity show at the Park Theater will be given Friday before Christmas by Max Michaels, the manager, with the cast of that week's show contributing their services, and with stars of other theaters also appearing. Mr. Michaels expects to be able to buy several hundred pairs of shoes for needy children from the proceeds.

* * *

Two young mimics, who are expected to prove "finds," are in "Calling All Stars." One is Al Bernie, son of L[illegible] Price, and the other is Artie Auerbach, who until a month ago was one of the star cameramen of the the New York Daily Mirror. Actor Auerbach brought his camera with him to Boston, but Lew Brown has assured him that the precaution is needless and that Artie will not have to seek a job for many months.

Baseball Film

The film program at the Bowdion starting tomorrow offers "Death on the Diamond," a thrilling big league baseball yarn, with Robert Young, Madge Evans, Nat Pendleton and Ted Healey as the stars. The companion picture is George Arliss in "The Last Gentleman." Six acts of headline vaudeville complete the program.

Role of Lillian Russell Given Old Star in 'The Great Ziegfeld' Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 20—Edna Purviance has a job. Surely you remember Charlie Chaplin's one-time leading lady, whose loyalty to Charlie and his to her, is motion picture history. She will play the glamorous Lillian Russell in "The Great Ziegfeld" and it's interesting to know that the deal was made through the Chaplin office which still has her under contract.

Louella O. Parsons

No stopping William Anthony McGuire on this "Ziegfeld" he is producing for Universal. He has negotiated with Lucienne Boyer, New York sensation, to play Anna Held. Toby Wing is slated for the role of Dolores, beautiful girl who walks through the show and never does a thing but look beautiful. With Leon Errol and Walter Catlett real Ziegfeld features, the cast is most interesting. Rumor is that Lewis Milestone will direct.

* * *

Billie Burke

Someone remarked that Billie Burke is the marvel of Hollywood. She looks about 28 and with each picture continues to improve her screen technique. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have just signed her for two pictures, "Copy Cat" and "Ambulance Nurse." I look one day to see Billie star-ing on her own. She's a great bet for any producer with her beauty, her experience, and her eternal youth.

* * *

Claudette Colbert, who could write her own ticket at any studio, has cast her lot with Paramount for the next two years. Claudette makes three pictures a year for Para and then she is free to make a certain number of outside pictures. This is the same type of contract that created such a sensation when Constance Bennett invented it a few years ago. Since that time any number of famous stars and directors have made themselves some extra money by doubling in brass at their own studios and others.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood

Mrs. Roger Pryor, who went to Reno with the avowed purpose of getting a divorce, has left Reno divorce-less. She suddenly decided not to free her attractive husband, which makes it a little embarrassing for pretty Ann Sothern. While Ann says she had no intention of marrying Mr. Pryor, she has been out with him at the prize fights, at first nights, and other places.

* * *

Rod La Rocque and Vilma Banky, who can tell moreabout the vicissitudes of a movie star than any other two people I know, are both planning a screen comeback. Rod has been signed for two pictures, one an independent and the other a Fox number, "The Mystery Blonde," which Sol Wurtzel will produce with Gilbert Roland and Mona Barrie in the supporting cast. Vilma, who made several pictures in Germany since the advent of the talkies, is studying hard on her English and I am told she is about to sign a contract with one of the independent companies.

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood

NORMAN KRASNA, youthful playwright, admitting a terrific yen for MARGARET LA MARR, stock actress; SUE CAROL and a large party leaving for Mexico City in a few weeks to be JAMES CROFTON'S guests at the new resort he has opened there; the first MRS. RICHARD DIX, who questioned the legality of her divorce from DIX, doing a marathon to the marriage license bureau with DR. GUNDERSON after RICHARD made a financial settlement with her; WINFIELD SHEEHAN and ROSIE and IRVING NETCHER in Palm Springs for the week-end; getting so nobody stays home over Sunday any more; if it isn't Palm Springs or Arrowhead Springs, it is one of those ranches in the San Fernando Valley or at the Rancho Santa Fe; MIRIAM COOPER, the first MRS. RAOUL WALSH and former GRIFFITH star, in town telling her troubles; NANCY CARROLL off to New York on a holiday; her boy friend, WILLIAM VAN RENSSALAER SMITH, who tells any one who will listen how much he admires NANCY, is already there; GLENDA FARRELL going places with BERNARD NEWMAN, RKO gown designer; MAXINE DOYLE stepping out with GORDON WESTCOTT, her menace in the JOE E. BROWN picture; ANITA LOUISE back from her trip to New York, requesting the studio not to meet her—reason, she wanted to greet TOM BROWNE alone at the station. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Time Out for Romance in 'The White Parade'

JOHN BOLES LORETTA YOUNG

John Boles and Loretta Young are caught in an off-duty moment in "The White Parade," coming to the Keith-Memorial on Wednesday.

Lieberman to Add to His Chain

F. E. Lieberman will add another Boston theater to the Tremont and Loew's Columbia, now operating under his personal management. Double feature screen programs and minimum prices are features of the Lieberman policy, and the New England chain under his supervision is soon to be increased by the addition of one of Boston's largest theaters.

Theaters in Lowell, Portland, Me., and Syracuse, are now under his management, and definite announcement of the new Boston house to be added to the Lieberman chain will be made shortly.

Bozo Snyder is Howard Star

Bozo Snyder, whose comedy pantomime and capers have been a standby of burlesque for many seasons, returned to the stage at the Old Howard last evening, just as uproarious and just as enthusiastically received as ever. Bozo has runners-up in an all-star cast which features Louise Frazer, direct from a long and successful engagement at the Chicago World's Fair, and Mickey Markwood, whose comedy was also enthusiastically received. Jean Williams and Gertrude Hayes, Marty Bohn, the "Joe Penner" of burlesque, and Tiny Huff in some clever eccentric dancing, were among the other headliners.

Tiny Huff

Old Favorite at Park

The lovely Gladys McCormack, one of burlesque's big favorites, stars in "Footlight Flashes," the new revue which opened last evening at Minsky's Park theater. Miss McCormack heads a program that boasts a bevy of talented principals, a smart chorus line, and a group of comedians that clown their way through one of the most elaborate of the topnotch Minsky programs.

Marie Gundle, Sunya "Smiles" Slane, Viola Spaeth and Sally Martin, are among the beauties featured in "Footlight Flashes," and the liberal supply of comedy is hilariously handled by Lew Black, Jack Rosen, Jim Walte and Billy Fields.

The ace show is practicall stopped by a trio billed as "Th 3 Aristocrats," a dancing grot from the concert halls of Londo and Paris in one of the most se sational dance offerings on th boards.

There will be a midnight show Friday night.

In a radio address last night, the Republican Independent listed several instances in which he said waste of relief money had amounted to millions of dollars.

Former Boston Editor, 71, Dies

Newark, N. J., Nov. 20 (AP)—John T. Burke, associated editor of the Newark Ledger, and former New York and Boston newspaper editor, died today in St. Michael's hospital after an illness of several weeks. He was 71 years old.

Girl in Closet, Wife's Boss Puzzles Divorce Judge

Between the alleged girl in the husband's closet and the man who sent the wife to business school, Judge Edward B. O'Brien had a few things to think about today in the Salem probate court divorce petition of Mrs. Miriam Ellsworth Allen of Lynn.

Mrs. Allen's suit against Donald Herbert Allen, Lynn pharmacist, was taken under advisement by the court after hearing Mrs. Allen's uncontested testimony. But Judge O'Brien asked her a few questions before it was all over.

Mrs. Allen said she was married in 1925 and in June, 1931, she heard that her husband was "going around" with someone. She testified that she went to his drug store, asked her husband for some money.

GIRL STEPS OUT

Then, she said:

"When my husband went to the cloak room for the money I opened the door of the back room and walked in. I opened a closet door and a girl stepped out.

"My husband returned to the back room just then and he said that she had just dropped in. I told him it was a regular habit and I asked him what he was going to do about it.

"He said he was going to leave me. I asked him if he preferred this girl to me and he said yes."

Judge O'Brien then asked a few questions, remarking that he had received an anonymous letter just before the trial.

SQUIRED BY BOSS

Mrs. Allen denied that she had been "going around" with Amos Falls, a retired Saugus business man, in whose home she was employed after she became estranged from her husband. She declared:

"He used to bring me in his automobile from his house to mine when I was finished with my work. He sent me to business school in Boston for six months."

Q—Have you ever been around Boston with him? A—Well, he came up and brought me home once a week.

Q—Is he living with his wife? A—Yes, as far as I know.

Q—Who do you think could have written me the letter about this case? A—Well, I suppose Mr. Falls' wife.

Q—Is she jealous of your being with her husband? A—She hasn't liked it.

Then Mrs. Allen volunteered that it might have been her "husband's girl friend" who wrote the letter. Judge O'Brien asked who she was and Mrs. Allen replied:

"Miss Ruth Blodgett. She lives in the neighborhood of my husband's drug store."

In addition to the divorce, Mrs. Allen seeks custody of a four-year-old son, David Harlow Allen. Her husband is not contesting.

FISH SEES END OF TEXTILES

The entire textile export trade of the United States will be wiped out, and will be taken over by Japan, according to a prediction by Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, made before members of the City Club.

The move, which lost employment for 25,000 textile workers here, he said, was made by the State Department in refusing the offer of the Philippine government for preferential treatment of the American textile industry.

He urged the people of the textile states in the East to join with those of the South in organizinz through their congressional delegations, and asking the President to protect this country's interests.

Sinclair League Faces Disruption

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (AP)—Internal dissension threatened today to disrupt Upton Sinclair's "End of Poverty in California" movement, which sent him into the recent gubernatorial election as the standard bearer of the Democratic party.

Two hundred of Sinclair's workers in the recent political campaign have sent the former Socialist-author a resolution asking that he attend a special meeting Thursday. The group indicated that unless Sinclair appears to appease those at odds with the management of the E' P. I. C. the organization will be "at the fork of the road."

TWO CITIES MAY SHUT SCHOOLS

Public schools are closed today in one city and two other Massachusetts cities may follow suit next month.

Chicopee's schools, closed since November 8, will not resume until the first of the month at least.

In Everett insufficient funds may force the closing of schools December 4. The school committee has voted to close them unless additional operating allowance is made by the city government.

The Cambridge school committee is short $7000 of the school department employes' payroll, due December 1. Ralph W. Robart, member of the school board, said the condition will be only temporary.

Smith-Reynolds Divorce Tested

Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 20 (AP)—A test in North Carolina courts of the Nevada divorce which paved the way for Smith Reynolds, ill-fated tobacco heir, to marry the Broadway torch singer, Libby Holman, was in prospect today.

Upon the outcome depends the disposition of his $25,000,000 estate, and also the legal status of Miss Holman and their 22-months-old son Christopher, who was born seven months after his father's death from a pistol wound.

Dance for Friend Society

THE SUPPER DANCE for the Boston Children's Friend Society which opened the new Empire Room at the Hotel Vendome last evening was a brilliant social event . . . Mrs. William G. Rueter, who was in charge of arrangements, was enjoying the congratulations of her host of friends on the success of the party. Her gown was of wine red lace and she wore a corsage of orchids . . .

She was assisted by Mrs. Huntington Hardwick, mother of one of the loveliest of this season's buds, Miss Peggy Hardwick, who assisted the affair by selling boutonnieres of gardenias, wearing a picture gown of black velvet and silver . . . Mrs. Hardwick wore a becoming black Chantilly lace under her mink wrap . . .

Miss Helen Cushing, sister of Mrs. Rueter, was custodian of the tickets, attractive in tapestry embroidered crepe . . . Mrs. Harold G. Cutler, another member of the committee, wore a stunning black taffeta robe de style with orchids . . . Her daughter, Miss Dorothy Preston, chose the svelte light blue satin with orchids . . . it was a very orchidaceous affair.

Debutantes as Cigarette Venders

SEVERAL DEBUTANTES WERE CHARMING cigarette and lottery venders, taking chances on an enchanting little Sealingham terrier, which had been donated by Bayard Warren of Beverly Farms. Miss Marie LeMoyne Stevenson, a very beautiful girl with natural Titian hair and creamy skin, tall and slender, was the center of many admiring glances in stiff black taffeta . . . an attractive foil was her friend, Miss Marian McKean, very chic and dark, in rose-red crepe on clinging lines. Her sister, Miss Lee McKean, in grey satin and straight boyish bob stood out among the curly heads.

The popular William C. Chamberlain, "Bill" to his hundreds of friends, was master of ceremonies and introduced an artist who had journeyed on from New York especially for this event... Miss Marian Kirby, who was one of the stars of Seventh Heaven and a very clever monologuist . . . she told amusing stories but dashed off to catch the midnight back to Gotham before she could be cajoled to sing her inimitable Negro songs. It was a treat to hear her . . . but the attention of her audience left something to be desired. Cabaret singers and dancers are just excess expense when Boston's chattering matrons get together . . . the old sewing circle spirit is still abroad in this village.

Mrs. Thomas Claflin Wears Red Lace

NOTICEABLY DISTINGUE was Mrs. Vassar Pierce in jade green and black gown, in a large party . . . Mrs. Thomas Claflin selected red lace to offset her petite youthfulness and Mrs. Paul Clark was dainty in pale green and crystal.

Miss Gertrude Sands in red taffeta watched the show with interest...Mrs. Talbot Chase likewise chose dark red in the crepe for her evening finery...Mrs. Edward Taft was in a smart creation of pale pink taffeta, very Parisian...Mrs. T. S. Sampson displayed Ringo Bat (the Sealingham) under her arm before the chances were taken. Mr. William Nye of Commonwealth avenue was the winner.

Among the young group we glimpsed Miss Barbara Stevens in red, very vivacious...Miss Martha Endicott like a lotus lily in water-green crepe and lei of yellow cocque...pretty Hazel Wigntman in brown and gold with distinctive hair coiffure...Olivia Stone, adorable in pure white with ostrich feathers around her shoulders.

Mrs. H. G. Cutler

Others noted were Mrs. Walter Buckland in soft rose satin, a handsome woman...Mrs. Malcolm B. French in a party with Mrs. William Coburn and Mrs. Lyman Gutterson and their escorts...Mrs. Coburn is entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Douglas G. Bonner of New York. They are here on a visit to Mr. Paul Bonner, former London correspondent of Vogue, who has just acquired a house at Rye Centre near Exeter to be near his son who is a student at the Academy.

Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield came in late after taking her large party to "Gold Eagle Guy" at the Majestic...she was in the so-becoming black taffeta.

Others noted were Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Rust, the new bride very attractive...Mr. and Mrs. J. Gardiner Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jenkins, Dr. and Mrs. Harold S. Tobey, Mrs. F. L. Felton and a party which included Mr. Felton, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Rice and Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Hersey.

Society Well Represented in Cast of Pageant

History of Ireland to Be Portrayed at Garden

"THE PAGEANT OF THE CELT" opens a five-performance engagement at Boston Garden on Thursday evening of this week for the benefit of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund. The history of Ireland will be portrayed in ten scenes, showing the arrival of the Milesians and the battle of Tailte, through the coming of Patrick, the Golden Age, the strategy of King Brian Boru, the wedding of Eva and Strongbow, the Gaelic Alliance, the trial of Robert Emmet and Easter week in 1916.

A large cast, many of which have been chosen from among society's ranks, will be assisted by a choir, and orchestra, under the direction of Benedict FitzGerald, of Cambridge, who arranged the music for the original performance, which was an outstanding feature at the Chicago World Fair, last year.

The pageant was written by John V. Ryan, Chicago attorney, after two years of study and research.

A matinee on Sunday, Nov. 25, will precede the last of the evening shows on that day. It will be a brilliant spectacle in color and authentic costume, with society occupying many boxes. Everyone is cordially invited.

B. C. Club Aids

BOSTON COLLEGE DRAMATIC Club members are assisting the Salt and Pepper Club of St. Ignatius Parish, Boston College, in the presentation of Walter Ben Hare's comedy "Sunshine." The first evening performance will be given Monday, November 26, in the college auditorium.

Miss Dorothy Grimes, alumna of Fenway Notre Dame and sophomore at Wellesley College will appear in the lead as Sunshine. Stanley Driscoll, well known in college dramatics supports Miss Grimes in the role of "Buddy" Brady. They make a delightful appearance in their stage characters. Both young folks are well known in the college social set, Mr. Driscoll being a member of the class of '37 at B. C.

A front line chorus group consists of the Misses Virginia Lichtner, Jean Welch, Marietta De Napoli, Rita Maloney, Virginia Graham, Madeline Keefe and Peggy Barry.

Miss Mary Ormsby, daughter of "Bill" Ormsby of football fame, nearly steals the show in the character of the "Youngest" child. The old-fashioned waltz is done to a turn by a group of modern girls who are the envy of their "grandmeres."

The proceeds will go to charity as in previous years.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy Is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

SILK "BALLET" SACHET SPREADS GLORIOUS SCENT FOR TWO WHOLE YEARS

Clothes for the Fun of It

By Prunella Wood

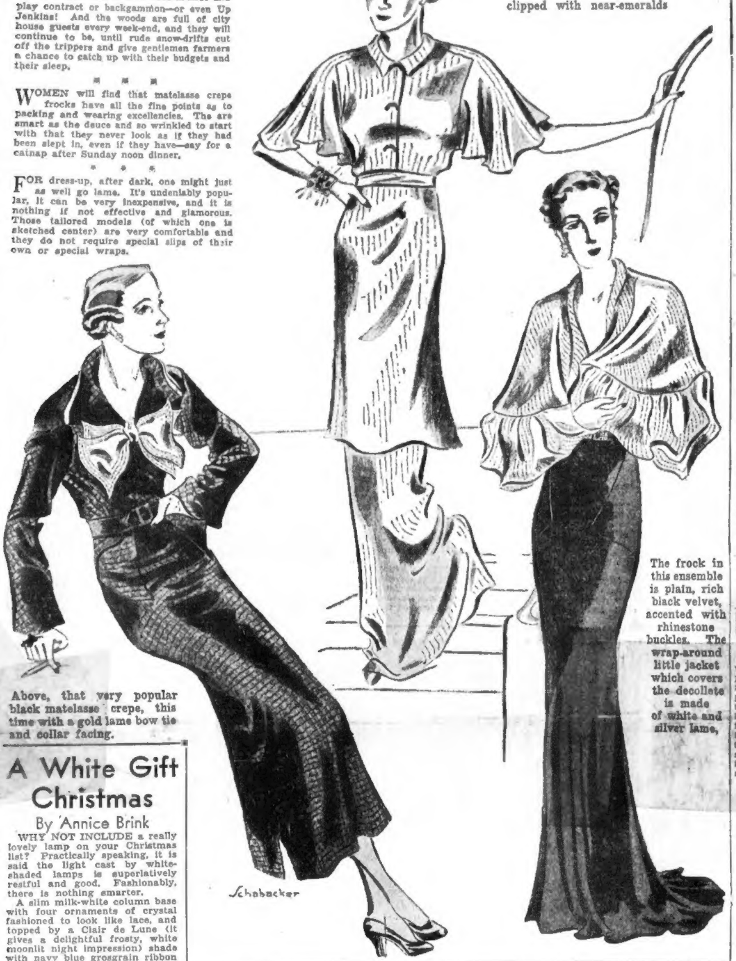
HOUSEPARTIES again? These are the times when it's fun to stay outdoors as a wintering sun will make it pleasant for one, and then rush in to a wood-fireside and play contract or backgammon—or even Up Jenkins! And the woods are full of city house guests every week-end, and they will continue to be, until rude snow-drifts cut off the trippers and give gentlemen farmers a chance to catch up with their budgets and their sleep.

* * *

WOMEN will find that matelasse crepe frocks have all the fine points as to packing and wearing excellencies. The are smart as the deuce and so wrinkled to start with that they never look as if they had been slept in, even if they have—say for a catnap after Sunday noon dinner.

* * *

FOR dress-up, after dark, one might just as well go lame. It's undeniably popular, it can be very inexpensive, and it is nothing if not effective and glamorous. Those tailored models (of which one is sketched center) are very comfortable and they do not require special slips of their own or special wraps.



Center, a lame tunic model with a suggestion of the shirtmaker in its lines. It is white with a gold thread, clipped with near-emeralds

Above, that very popular black matelasse crepe, this time with a gold lame bow tie and collar facing.

A White Gift Christmas

By Annice Brink

WHY NOT INCLUDE a really lovely lamp on your Christmas list? Practically speaking, it is said the light cast by white-shaded lamps is superlatively restful and good. Fashionably, there is nothing smarter.

A slim milk-white column base with four ornaments of crystal fashioned to look like lace, and topped by a Clair de Lune (it gives a delightful frosty, white moonlit night impression) shade with navy blue grosgrain ribbon fillets, is the newest modern lamp in town. It definitely proves how enchanting and far from severe the modern touch can be.

* * *

White table settings are increasingly smart. They are equally effective when the contrast is not hard and dazzling, for white alone can be a thing of sheer beauty. Pottery ware, almost as light as china, is to had in interesting luncheon sets with plates suggesting grape-leaf, cockle shell, or simple square disc shapes.

As for end, coffee and incidental tables—the best-looking seen in years are finished in antique or bone white. For the neo-classic touch there is a coffee table with lyre-shaped legs inspired by the Pompeiian, and amber or ritz blue mirror tops.

* * *

Empire motifs—stars and crossed arrows, laurel wreaths, and frequently the Napoleonic initial—are striking in old gold on bone white.

One of the nicest tables seen of this type is a good-sized end or hall table size, with lyre-shaped legs of bone white and black mat lacquer; a bone white top; and side panels of black lacquer with a gold metal empire motif. It would add new life and sparkle to a foyer, or a living room group.

As for smaller decorative white objects, there are endless numbers to choose from—of antique or modern inspiration. They range from salt-glaze Tobey jugs to an all-white luncheon set called "Pent-House."

Curing Callous

Question: I have a very painful callous on the sole of my right foot. What can I do to remove without using a knife, or razor blade? E. T.
Boston.

Answer: A callous can be the source of great discomfort as well as pain, particularly if you do much walking. Apply mineral oil to your foot at night. In the morning soak the foot in warm, soapy water. Dry, and friction vigorously with a toilet pumice stone. It may take several treatments to wear away the dead skin, but that is better than using a knife, which all too often results in infection and serious trouble.

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE —:— By Adele Garrison

MARY PUT her hands to her head with a gesture of exasperation as Katy told her that she never would be able to fool the young people who were trailing the bridal party if she wore her new traveling hat above Mrs. Ticer's old coat

"What a dumb coot I turned out to be," she said, whipping off the offending hat and gazing at it menacingly. "Luckily, it's one of those things it won't hurt to fold."

She tucked the hat in the folds of Mrs. Ticer's coat, which enveloped her, and looked appealingly at the elder woman.

"May I wear your hat, too?" she asked. "Oh! How dear of you!"

For Mrs. Ticer was already taking down from a hook upon the wall the comfortable but shapeless old felt hat which she wears to work. She walked back to Mary with it and pressed the hat down over her dusky hair.

"Turn around," she demanded. Then, as Mary obeyed, she gave a delighted chuckle.

"Isn't she the spittin' image of me from the back?" she asked joyously.

The resemblance in figure, stuffed out as Mary was with Mrs. Ticer's sweater, was indeed remarkable, and I said so with decision.

"Watch me!" Mary said, and walked across the room in so lifelike an imitation of Mrs. Ticer's gait that our laughter was punctuated with astonished little gasps.

"Perfect," I ejaculated.

"Marvelous!" Noel said with shining eyes. And Mary swept us a bow.

"You're pretty nifty, yourself," she told Noel, who had invested himself, with Mr. Ticer's help, in the older man's long raincoat and old slouch hat.

MARY SAYS GOODBY

"You haven't time for compliments," I warned. "You must start at once. Remember, the car is just behind the turn, and Jerry is watching this door so as to start it when he sees you come out."

Noel started for the door, but Mary waited to throw her arms around me, clinging to me as she had done to Marion.

"Goodby, dearest and best of aunties," she murmured, then gave me a warm tremulous kiss and hastily followed Noel, throwing back over her shoulder exuberant little goodbys and thanks to Katie and the Ticers as she went.

She grabbed Noel by the arm just as he was opening the door.

"Walk just as much like Mr. Ticer she tossed back a reminder to Katie.

"All ready, Katie?" she inquired. "Don't forget we're about 10 feet from the door. Noel, remember you go first."

I caught back a smile at Mary's recognition of the manner in which the Ticers always walked. Mr. Ticer invariably stalking along a few feet in advance of his wife.

SAFELY AWAY

"All right," Noel said. "Goodby, everybody."

His voice was perfunctorily courteous, but mechanical, and I knew that he was practically moving as in a trance, with but one obsessing thought—to get Mary safely away before Avis Arlen should have a chance to make any further mischief.

But Mary was keyed up to concert pitch. "What a radio announcer my husband turned out to be," she gibed. "Let us hope he'll be able to say 'Heigh-ho, everybody,' just as musically when we get back. Now Noel, open the door."

Noel obeyed her, and passed out in front of her. She whispered something to him as he passed, and I guessed that it was a second reminder to walk like Mr. Ticer. At any rate, he went down the path, simulating Mr. Ticer's gait in creditable fashion—he has not his histrionic heritage in vain—and Mary came plodding after him so like Mrs. Ticer that I almost turned my head to make sure that, by some unexpected metamorphosis, they had not exchanged roles.

Katie stepped into the open doorway as they left.

"Mrs. Ticer!" she called shrilly, just as I saw Bill and Hank running toward us from Noel's old car.

To Be Hung On a Golden Ring

By the Beauty Editor

IF YOU HAVE ANY backward leanings towards gay-nineties elegance, plus a yen for enchantment of the twentieth-century kind, you can do no better than get acquainted before Christmas with a new "ballet" sachet which is making its bow to Boston in the manner of a premiere ballerina.

* * *

This sachet will keep its scent intact for two years—in fact it is guaranteed, and that is saying a lot for any perfume sachet.

It's hard to do justice to a sachet in print—even this kind of sachet—so all I can say is that it is really like nothing you have ever seen before. You hang it on your closet and almost immediately its heavy, heady fragrance scents your clothes in a truly remarkable manner. Every time a frock is taken from the closet you are guaranteed that it will be gloriously scented.

The sachet comes in a white box. You get your first surprise when the box opens and a shower of fine white silk greets your eye. The fringe is attached to a silk ball, filled of course with the most exquisite sachet.

At the top of the ball is a little gold ring for "hanging" purposes. It comes in all colors—pink, green, gold, blue, orchid and peach. Its beauty and fragrance is so stimulating that you will feel as triumphant as a Valkyrie.

* * *

If you are looking for a gift that is utterly new and different—do consider this "ballet" sachet. It is certainly for all those whose names can be found in the Blue Book of perfect taste. The maker of this grand gadget is the same who sponsored one of last year's most famous and popular perfumes. The same fragrance is captured again.

To learn where this lovely contribution to glamour may be secured telephone the Beauty Editor, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Error in Lead Proves Costly

By Josephine Culbertson

Mrs. Erling Wagle of Oslo, Norway sent me a hand which will provide amusement to all Bridge fans, with the exception of the poor East-West players who were the victims. Due to his partner's having mistaken his opening pass for a bid, South suddenly found himself the declarer at a six-no-trump contract, which he eventually made on a squeeze after having previously received every possible good break.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

West led the four of clubs and it is surprising that when North laid down the dummy South was able to play out the hand. According to Mrs. Wagle, South was a phlegmatic gentleman and merely looked surprised at his partner. The latter's explanation was promptly forthcoming. He had mistaken South's opening pass for a spade bid.

South won the opening lead with the club King in his own hand and then played a small heart. West's Queen fell, the dummy covered with the King, and East won with the Ace. East now returned the spade King, and South won with the Ace, now leading a small diamond. The finesse of the Jack won, the next trick was taken by the King of diamonds in South's hand, and the club finesse too now succeeded.

South proceeded to run dummy's good diamonds and the Ace of clubs, and on the last diamond lead the cards were distributed as follows:

On the last diamond lead poor East was completely squeezed and South took the remainder of the tricks.

Of course, with an opening spade lead, which with West's original holding would have been far wiser, there would have been a different story to tell, as despite all the breaks the contract would have been defeated three tricks.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

Wedding Toast

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married next month and as I have never been to a wedding breakfast and have no relatives here to help me, I would certainly appreciate it if you will tell me what the bridegroom should say or what toast he should give before starting the wedding breakfast. M.

Usually, just after the wedding breakfast has been started, the best man offers a toast to the bride and groom, and the bridegroom responds to this, for his bride and himself. He says something like this, "Mary and I thank you, with all our hearts, for your good wishes. It is wonderful to have all of you dear friends with us on this happy day, and we hope you'll always be with us on our anniversaries."

Sifts Seductive Fragrance Into Room

Luxury in the form of a "ballet" sachet to fit the tempo of Milady's smart wardrobe is making its presentation to Boston. Exquisitely scented with a famous fragrance, it will perfume each and every one of the frocks in your closet. A silken tassel wafts a rich, reckless fragrance that is guaranteed to last for two years. The sachet is Paris' latest contribution to the new elegance of the mode.

Empire Shoe Is New

THE LATEST evening footwear to delight a weary world is the Empire shoe. Really a combination of the classic monk shoe and the sandal, it is a contradictory affair, extremely high cut in front and slashed to the sole on the sides. Developed in gold and silver kid, it expresses the new feeling for the closed-up evening shoe. The vamp isn't cut out at all, but trimmed with contrasting metallic kid designs or incrustations of rhinestones or colored stones.

FREEZING of clothes on the line during cold weather is prevented by using a little salt in last rinsing water.

Walter Is Late at Tryst With Helen

SYNOPSIS

Luxurious to the nth degree of commercial splendor were the establishments of the Anastasia Beauty Salons, but dreary and unkempt were the locker quarters of the operators, who dressed and "made up" for business in whitewashed, barnlike rooms. In one room, as they rouged their cheeks and donned their fresh, starched white uniforms, the girls talked . . . talked chiefly about the Riley sisters, who managed each of the Anastasia Salons, and about Walter Riley, their brother and the owner of the salons.

Among the operators was one who stood out from the rest—Helen Schiller. One day, before the salon opened for business, Helen was demonstrating some dance steps that she had seen on the stage the night before . . . and Walter Riley appeared.

Her dancing was a blow to discipline . . . but he did not make his presence known. Instead, he backed away, to enter a little later, banging a door. When he appeared then, all the girls were at work, and he went on into the office of his sister Stella, who managed the salon. That evening he found himself back in the shop where Helen worked. Intending to speak to her about her dancing of the morning, he found himself disarmed by her smile.

When she asked him if he liked to dance, he appeared uncertain, admitting finally that he had never danced. Helen was surprised at this, and he suddenly asked her if she would teach him to dance. "I'd love to," she said honestly, and so they decided to go to one of the better hotels for dinner and dancing. Then she suggested tactfully that it might be better to meet in front of the library. He felt ill at ease. However, as the evening wore on and they danced he found himself enjoying the dancing in spite of his awkwardness.

CHAPTER V

He drove her home to the decent two-family brick house in which she lived in Bay Ridge, and they sat in the car and talked until she shivered and he realized she was cold in her thin coat, and told her she had better go in, the while he held her there. She had a childlike obedience that made him feel masterful and protective. He did not kiss her goodnight, although he wanted to. They shook hands.

He came up on the little brownstone stoop with her and waited while she produced her latchkey and opened the door. She did not ask him in; he didn't expect it. His sisters asked men in after the theaters for cocktails and sandwiches. But in the flat here, others were sleeping; probably someone slept in the parlor. He understood all this. The Rileys had in their meteoric rise passed through just such a stage.

"Good night," she whispered. "Thanks for a grand time."

"Me too," he whispered. "I had a grand time, too."

"I'm so glad. I've got to go in now. Good night."

"Will you go out with me tomorrow night? To the theater?"

She had no artifices to intrigue him. Coquetry was alien to her nature.

"Oh, I'd love to."

"I'll get something. A comedy?"

"Yes." She was getting hoarse with whispering. "Good night."

Her fingertips slowly left his hand. She closed the inner door.

TIPTOES INTO FLAT

Carefully he closed the outer door. He stood for a moment on the doorstep, his hat in his hand, and he realized he was quite idiotically happy and that it was raining on his head.

Helen tiptoed into the flat, carefully closing the door so that the lock would click softly, and then she crept down the hall to the room she shared with her sister, Belle. She was glad Belle was asleep. She didn't want to break the spell by talking. She undressed without a light and groped for her cotton nightgown under the pillow.

Every minute of it had been perfect. She laughed silently as she recalled bits of their conversation. And she had been afraid! He was so funny, so clever and amusing. But the most thrilling part of all was that he asked her to go out with him again tomorrow night. She stifled a persistent little voice within her that kept saying: "When will it end? What does he want of you?" and gave herself up entirely to rosy, ecstatic, luxurious dreams until they, too, were lost in sleep.

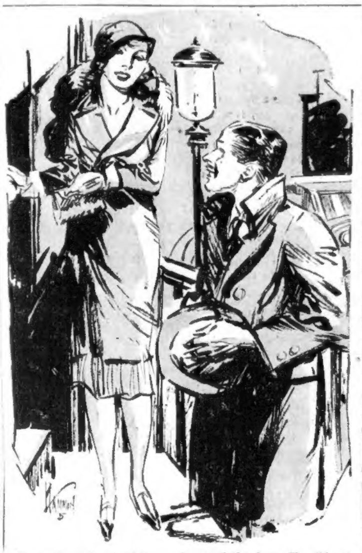
Tuesday morning in the washroom. The same bustle, the same grumbling, the same conversation.

"What 'ju do las' night?"

"Not a darn thing," said Helen, her face over her knees as she laced up the white oxfords. "It was a terrible night, wasn't it?"

WALTER IN DOORWAY

There were the usual Tuesday morning run of appointments. Burr of the nail files, sizzle of steam, smell of scorched hair and swishing of water.



She produced her latchkey and opened the door. She did not ask him in; he didn't expect it.

At about 11 o'clock, as if attracted by a magnet, she suddenly looked up. Walter Riley stood in the doorway. He caught her glance. His face wore the dark, nervous mask she knew so well. She did not smile at him. She simply looked once and then swiftly dropped her eyes. He saw that her expression never changed. She went on swiftly buffing her customer's nails. He was satisfied and relieved. No one noticed. Everyone was busy. The hum of conversation mingled with the hum and buzz of machinery. The room was a beehive of industry. Helen worked silently; struggled desperately to cover up her sudden nervousness.

At 5:30 she rose, stretched her neck. Shooting pains darted under her eyes. The thin wintry sun had set and she could see the sky outside was quite dark. The girls were silent, fagged, going about the tail-end of the day with listless, automatic gestures. This lassitude, however, would fall away as soon as they were washed and out of the hateful uniform, for they were healthy young animals and a stretch, a cat-wash, fresh makeup, their own clothes—and they would be alive, buoyant again. Many had dates. "That guy I met las' week. . . ." He would be waiting. They tripped out gaily enough.

Helen lingered over her dressing. She had had no word from him all day. She promised she'd go with him to the theater—or was it all a dream? He'd probably be waiting downstairs—or should she go to the library where she had met him last night?

PUTS ON UNIFORM

Carefully she brushed her best black chiffon dress and slipped it over her head. Then she put her uniform on again and combed and set her long, slightly waved ash blonde hair. She wore it simply in a big loop at the back of her head and just waved slightly over her ears. Most of the girls frizzed the inside of the hair over the ears to achieve these high puffs which completely covered the ears. Some put in false wads of hair; others frames of thin buckram, on which the hair was smoothly laid. These were known as "cootie garages." Her hair done, Helen powdered her nose with pink powder and bit her lips. She didn't rouge.

It was now six-thirty. Except for the cleaning women, there was no one about. No sign of Walter.

She put on her black hat, lined with blue velvet, and her dark blue coat with skunk collar and cuffs; then, still uncertain, decided to wait for him downstairs in the lobby.

The little old Jew who kept the newsstand was closing for the day. Helen stayed with him in his little booth and chatted until he was ready to go. The night elevator men came on. The clock over the entrance door pointed to seven; then fifteen past seven. Helen was nervous with uncertainty. If she went to the library, he might come here. He might, on the other hand, be waiting there.

WALTER IS LATE

Seven-thirty and despair. Still she waited. At twenty-five minutes to eight he burst in.

"Gee, I'm so late," he apologized contritely, "but honestly I couldn't help it!"

"Oh, I'm so glad you came!"

"Listen, I had to go up to my sister, Irene's. It was important and I couldn't get away I couldn't even get to a phone. My sister's getting married. I'll tell you all about it later. Gee, you must be starved. I'm terribly sorry." He steered her out of the lobby. "We'll get a good quick dinner. I know a place."

They were driving swiftly up Fifth avenue.

"I knew you must have been delayed."

"But you knew I'd come," he asserted fiercely.

"Oh, yes, I'd have waited."

MAYOR SPIKES BENCH REPORT

Mayor Mansfield denied that he is to be appointed to the Massachusetts bench. He stated that he would not accept the appointment as judge even if it were offered to him by Governor Ely.

A statement to this effect, appearing in a Boston newspaper (not The Evening American) is without foundation or truth, the mayor added.

He also denied that he anticipated a lack of co-operation from Governor-elect Curley.

Commenting on the published rumor, Mayor Mansfield stated:

"My attention has been directed to an article in a newspaper intimating that I am to be appointed to the bench by Governor Ely and that I feel that Governor-elect Curley will not co-operate with me in city affairs. There is not even a glimmer of truth in this statement.

"I have work to do here and I propose to stay on the job. I am sure that Governor Ely has no notion whatever of appointing me to the bench. I would not accept such an appointment if it were offered to me."

EMMETT TRIAL TO BE PART OF CELT PAGEANT

Because of the interest of Boston audiences, "The trial of Robert Emmett" will be added to the huge spectacle, "The Pageant of the Celt," which opens next Thursday at the Boston Garden for four days in aid of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

Raymond A. Fitzgerald will be narrator for this added episode in the pageant, for which seats are now on sale at the Boston Garden and at the Jordan Marsh Company and the William Filene's Sons Company.

ANCIENT MUSIC SET

The pageant will be divided into nine scenes. The music will take the audience back to the years before Christ, where there were only five notes in the scale—the earliest of the Gaelic songs to be heard being "Aroisin Dhub."

Edward J. Scanlon is director of the pageant, Benedict FitzGerald, superintendent of music in the Cambridge public schools, in charge of the music, and there will be several Boston interpolations, including a poem, "The Call of the Blood," by the Rev. Hugh F. Blunt, the priest-poet and pastor of St. John's church, Cambridge.

PIPERS TO PLAY

Irish pipers, headed by M. J. Twomey, will appear in the pageant and there will be Scottish pipers, headed by Major George B. Smith of the 42nd Highlanders.

In addition, the cast will include members of the Boston University Glee Club and of the Boston College Dramatic Club, the Boston University Dramatic Club, the Mary Francis Rooney School of Expression, and students of Emerson College, Cambridge Latin School, Rindge High School and many other schools and organizations.

POOL KILLING TRIAL OPENS

Worcester, Nov. 20—In a heavy aura of dramatics, the Fitchburg swimming pool murder mystery went to trial today in Superior Court, with Angelo Ghenes, 48, as defendant charged with the slaying of James Gamvas, 64-year-old recluse, last July.

Planks from a wagon, bearing red stains alleged to be those made of human blood; photographs of wheel tracks and hoofprints taken near the swimming pool and other exhibits were promised in the opening by District Attorney Edwin G. Norman.

Gamvas' body was found floating in the city of Fitchburg's public swimming pool on the morning of July 31. The skull had been crushed.

Mystery Woman Leaves Saugus

Saugus cleared up a mysterious woman puzzle today and Judge William Ludden ordered her to "get out and stay out of Saugus."

She was the woman who stalked in front of the Saugus police station yesterday after a feminine voice warned them by telephone that a gun-toting woman would appear there and probably shoot a policeman.

Today they found she was Miss Mary Rogers, who sometimes uses the name of Frances King and who gave an address in Warren avenue, South End.

Miss Rogers—or King—admitted in court today that it was she who had telephoned. She said she didn't know why. Judge Ludden placed a disorderly conduct charge on file after the warning.

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

I wish I could understand how the minds of "progressive" educators work.

Recently a gentleman named Perry D Smith headmaster of a middle western high school has been among us, preaching two characteristic heresies of the moderns.

The first is that schools ought to do away with competition, prize giving and the like, substituting for it purely co-operative activity on the assumption that thus the weaker students will not be discouraged as they are at present.

Robert E. Rogers

The second is that education for information is useless.

The only power comes from co-operative action, the training in doing rather than knowing. Both these notions are apparently standard equipment of the "liberal" schools of today.

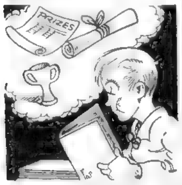
It is obvious that both ideas are intended to exalt the mediocre or average student at the expense of his superior. They are leveling tendencies, like so many of our liberal democratic notions today.

The intention is to prepare our children, not for a competitive society where brains and knowledge and ambition and perseverence are important, but for a mass society where the ability to co-operate in obeying orders is the more important thing, and where a small group of higher-ups monopolize the information and the initiative.

"Reds" Point Way

Curiously enough, the one modern state where co-operation is deemed fundamentally vital, the state of Soviet Russia, every device to stimulate individual ambition and achievement is used deliberately. The superor student, the one capable of leadership, is intentionally kept on his toes by the offer of prizes, ranks and titles.

In that the intensely practical Russians have borrowed the old methods of the successfully bourgeois education systems of England, France and Germany. The whole higher educational system of France is whittled down by the sieve system of competition.



The same has always been true in Germany. And the English universities are fed and kept brilliant by the competitive scholarships system of the secondary schools. No one will assert that the American system is more successful than theirs.

If we want a co-operative socialistic system—which is an open question—it may be that education in co-operative doing is the most important. But even in such a case you will find that the leadership is going to rest in the hands of that aristocratic minority that knows most. That favorite device of modern teaching which aims to confront students with imaginary situations in order to develop their power to make specific decisions is going to be of very little use so long as the situations and the decisions are imaginary.

Superior Brains

When the crisis comes the leadership is going to be found in those people who know most, who have the knowledge necessary to solve problems, not in those people whose decisions are based on theories of democratic co-operativeness and the like. For the great work of the world has always been done by the lonely aristocrat whose decisions are based on superior information.

Educational theories can always be made to sound inspiring and liberal, so long as one does not look the gift horse in the teeth. But it seems incredible that people fail to recognize that such ideas as I have been describing are not reputable practices based on history and experience and experiment but propaganda based on theory with the deliberate intention of producing a kind of society different from that most of us were brought up in and which is in accord with age-old knowledge of human nature.

I submit that our public schools, particularly in the West and Middle West, are falling into the hands of an education trust, the N. E. A.

The propaganda for a federal department of education is being carried on with the same end in view.

In the future as in the past the superior man and woman will be found to be disciplined by knowledge and information, stimulated by the hard application made necessary by organized competition. That process and only that will make leaders, whom the rank and file will obey, as they always have—and as is thoroughly fitting and right.

Letters Hold Key to Island Deaths

In German

SOLUTION WAITS TRANSLATION IN FEW WEEKS

By International News Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 20—A bundle of letters, written in German, today apparently contained the key to the final solution of the mystery of the Galapagos Island deaths.

Manuel Rodrigues, skipper of the San Diego fishing boat Santo Amaro, who discovered the bodies, in a radio to International News Service, declared that while no effort had been made to distinguish whether the bodies were those of a man and woman, they had been tentatively identified as those of Arthur Wittmer and Alfred Rudolph Lorenz.

The fact the bundle of letters which were found near the bodies were written in German prevented solution of the mystery at once.

A passport issued to Lorenz was found with the letters, Rodrigues radioed.

It was pointed out here there also was the possibilities the bodies might be those of Wittmer and his wife, that they might be those of Baroness Bouquet De Wagner and her mate known only as Phillipson, or that they might be the bodies of Dr. Frederick Ritter and Frau Dore Strauch Koerwien.

Find Baby Clothes

The finding of a bundle of baby clothes lent some credence to the theory the bodies might be those of Wittmer and his wife. Mrs. Wittmer was believed to be the mother of the only white baby on the islands.

Captain Rodrigues emphatically stated he did not intend to go from lonely Marchena Island, where the bodies were discovered to Santo Maria Island.

Blood Gifts! By 2 Women For Stranger

PLIGHT OF BOY BRINGS FIRST OFFERS

For the first time in the memory of veteran hospital attendants at City Hospital, two women donors have offered their blood for a patient whom they did not know.

The plight of Victor Marotta, 16, of 4 Havre street, East Boston, who has been battling for his life against the ravages of hemophilia, the rare blood disease which has taken the lives of many male members of Europe's royal families prompted the offers.

Mrs. Mary F Thomas 38, of Astor street, Back Bay, who has a son Victor's age, was one of the volunteers. She had read of the boy's struggle and was moved to help. Miss Ethel Broughall, 22, of 4 Capen street, Milton, a graduate nurse, was the other.

Doctors at City Hospital believe that they have stopped the flow in Victor's case, and can bring about an eventual cure with but one more transfusion.

Bette and Her Kisses; A Harvard Victory Hope

BLONDE "SPARKPLUG" SOUGHT TO VANQUISH YALE

Now next Saturday being not far away and the Yales having risen up in their might to smite down the Princetons, the Harvards cast about today for a new idea toward victory and hit upon the possibility of Bette Davis kissing the Crimson lads to success.

Although this was not at all an original idea, Bette having kissed an underdog team to victory less than a month ago, it was hailed with a reserved cheer, because Harvard will go into the Yale Bowl next Saturday a bit shy as to prowess and record for the year.

So today Harvard scouts were casting around for Bette, who departed from her alma mater surroundings in the waning days of October, to return to California and before the week is much older the blonde movie star from Lowell, Newton and Ashburnham may be burning up the airlanes in an effort to reach New Haven before it is too late.

Now how effective these kisses by Bette might be is a matter of some conjecture, but even if they are only one-half as effective as the kisses she promised and bestowed upon the gridiron lads from old Cushing Academy, the Harvards will feel that their score on coming out of the Bowl will be just double what otherwise it might have been.

In fact, Bette's kisses on the footballers of her old alma mater (Cushing) were so torrid that there is even now some doubt about the final score of the game in which the kisses figured—that between Cushing and Deerfield Academies on October 27.

In reports of that date, the score is variously given with 35 to 0 and 34 to 0 as the nearest consensus. As late as yesterday, the Harvard Crimson, after much thought, figured out the score as 28 to 0.

So you can see what Bette might be able to do with next Saturday's Harvard-Yale game. Even Colonel Egan might not know the score.

Stein Smile Wins Radcliffe And Words Bring Laugh

Alma Mater Listens

"THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS REPETITION," WRITER SAYS

By ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

Bostonians with high brows and tortoise shell glasses were climbing up the cobble-stoned streets of Beacon Hill today trying to borrow copies of "Four Saints," "The Making of Americans," "Three Lives" or "Portraits."

That was because Gertrude Stein, back in Cambridge after more than 31 years—most of them spent in Paris as the guardian angel or the nurse of all the geniuses of the century, depending on your point of view—yesterday re-visited her alma mater, Radcliffe, and explained why a rose is a rose is a rose.

Speaking in the college's Agassiz Theater, Miss Stein opened her apologia with a decisive, one-sentence triumph over the smart newspaper boys who write such "funny" stories about her and her style.

"There is no such thing as repetition," she said, "unless it be the same old theme that the newspapers use over and over again in their clever stories about me."

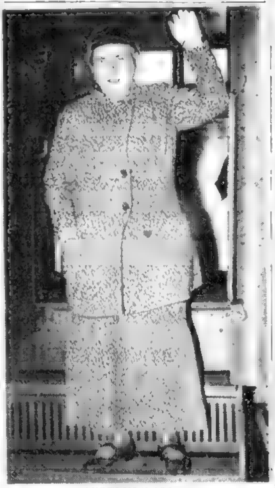
But she said it with so gracious a smile that it did not rankle a bit. That smile is the key to Gertrude Stein. She is, as Alexander Woolcott said a very beautiful woman, all photographs to the contrary notwithstanding.

Her steel-gray hair is cropped as short as that of the captain of the Harvard crew. She is short and a bit on the heavy side. And with her hands in her tweed coat pockets, her walk would drive a Ziegfeld chorus master to distraction.

But she has poise. She is perfectly at ease, and she has the gift of making every one who hears her feel that she is an old and dear friend. Her voice is friendly. Her eyes have a cheerful sparkle. And there is that smile. It cannot be resisted. Hollywood could learn much from her.

Simply because Miss Stein does not try to carry it off in such a high-handed way, you begin to think that there may be something in her work after all. And it is her work—rather than herself—that she would have you understand.

"Repetition," she asks, "is there any such thing? Is it not insistence? And insistence," she insists, "is always different. Never does a frog hop twice in just the same way. Never are two bird notes just the same. That is a thing one can understand."



GERTRUDE STEIN

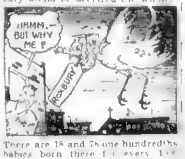
Roxbury Tops City in Newcomers

It may be one of those air pockets that drives Old Doc Stork into the Roxbury-Jamaica Plain and East Boston sections of Boston.

At any rate, those are the sections which rate higher in Boston births than any in the rest of the city.

The winnah? If babies could be divided into one-hundreths, Roxbury would be declared the winner.



There are 18 and 78 one hundredths babies born there for every 1000 persons according to Joseph W Monahan of the vital statistics department, who doesn't mind splitting babies into decimals.

East Boston has 18.40 babies to every 1000 persons. One might say they lose out by a nose.

FOR PEACE

By Associated Press

London, Nov. 20. King George of Great Britain pleaded for the maintenance of world peace today as he opened the year's fourth session of Parliament.

He told his lawmakers that the British government "will continue to make the support and extension of the authority of the League of Nations a cardinal point of their policy."

Fog and a piercing cold caused a curtailment of the ancient pageantry of the king's procession from Buckingham Palace to the House of Parliament. He and Queen Mary turned their backs on the golden coach of state and made the journey in an automobile.

The king mounted the dais in the House of Lords and stood before his golden throne as he addressed the legislators.

Fish Bites Gull, Even Kills It

SO THAT'S NEWS TO ALL HARDY FISHERMEN

When a sea gull kills a fish it's not news—but when a fish kills a sea gull that's diferent. It happened today in sight of scores of fishermen and others off Eastern Packet Wharf between Commercial and T Wharves.

The gull was one of at least 200 flying around the wharves alighting in the harbor at times to devour a fish.

Then things began to happen. A gull screamed. It flew about 10 yards into the air. Imbedded in its head were the teeth of a fish. Fishermen dropped their work and stared. Then the gull and the fish dropped like an anchor, struck the water with a splash and disappeared.

Musical Beer Trucks Fought by Pastors

ALDERMEN OF MALDEN MUST ACT ON PETITION

Malden's aldermen will have to decide tonight whether permitting beer trucks to go around the city with Christmas carol singers aboard is commercializing the Christmas spirit.

That is what 14 Malden ministers charge. They petitioned Mayor John D. Devir to have rescinded the permit granted to one brewing company. Members of various congregations have been asked by the ministers to object, too.

Mayor Devir will put the petition up to the aldermen at this evening's meeting.

NEW YORK

DAY BY DAY

New York, Nov. 20—Stark Young seems to have come into his own in his native land. When he was a struggling professor in the University of Texas, a famous English author, lecturing there said in referring to Young: "In this university you have one of the greatest poets since Keats."

While Young has always done important writing he rattled around in more or less obscurity in America. Although he has been lionized in England and France and especially in Italy. But now his romantic novel of the Civil War "So Red the Rose" has swept him to the peak of the best selling list.

O. O. McIntyre

A bachelor in his 50's, thin, dapper, bald, he was born in Como, Miss., and aside from his professorial apprenticeship in Texas was an instructor of English at Amherst. From there he branched off as a contributor to various little arty magazines dealing with the theater.

For awhile he was the dramatic critic of the New York Times and likely the least conspicuous of the flamboyant first nighters. Lately he has been identified editorially with the New Republic. Although he has written more than a dozen books, his last was first to make a big splash.

$750 for 60 Cents

Most folk who have, after a lapse of years had furniture moved across the country, will understand a recent reaction of Don Herold's. He spent $750 to have his household effects shipped from California, where he had left it two years ago. And all he got he really wanted was a set of Kin Hubbard which he could have had sent for 60 cents by parcel post.

I notice the experiment of refurbishing the city-owned Claremont into a come-one, come-all restaurant and dancing place has come to temporary impasse. It is dark. It is hoped the gloom is only temporary, for this beautiful white structure on an upsweep of Riverside Drive offers the most entrancing vista of any restaurant in Manhattan. Once the gallants of Alexander Hamilton's day beamed and curtesyed there. In the meantime the Central Park Casino, privately owned and lifting an eyebrow for hoi polloi is gay with light, the lilt of Eddie Duchin's witchery and the swish of flying feet.

ALL THAT'S LEFT— CANAL BOAT BONDS!

The Rialto originally on 14th street, has swung in lazy parabolas to that strip from Columbus Circle to Fifth avenue, known as Central Park South. The large hotels, particularly the St. Moritz and Essex, are largely filled with folk of the stage and radio. A sidewalk cafe along the thoroughfare has given added showiness to the celebrity parade and made it the autograph hunter's paradise. The shift northward almost emptied many hotels in the 40's of their long established stage patronage.

Toothless Beauty

Yet in the fountain of activity so suddenly geysering along Central Park South there remains the constant death's head of the feast to scramble a metaphor. This is the enormous structure of recessional towers almost finished when depression struck. Slowly it is disintegrating with magnificent decay and in rain storms has the leakiness of a badly caulked boat. Because of outside grandeur it has become the most famous of the sky-scraper "empties" and at night its black gloom in the surrounding building dazzle suggests a great beauty with a missing tooth.

Marion Gillespie, well known for "When You Look Into the Heart of A Rose" lyrics, is one of the writing fraternity's most productive free lances. Out of the Indiana Literaray Belt, she turns her hand to more than two dozen chores and keeps them going smoothly. She writes verse for juvenile magazines, travel vignettes for newspaper syndicates, words for songs, personality stories, jokes for humorous weeklies and has collaborated on a play or so. She is known in editorial sanctums as a foremost "first aider." If she is called on the phone for a yarn at midnight, it's on the editor's desk next morning. She once dashed off the lyrics for a musical comedy song in 21 minutes while the messenger boy from the producer's waited.

BURN EFFIGY OF COLLEGE HEAD

By Associated Press

New York Nov. 20—The figure of President Frederick B. Robinson of City College was burned in effigy today before a crowd of about 1000 persons.

Police estimated that half of them were students who struck in protest of the action of President Robinson in expelling 21 undergraduates for staging a demonstration during a visit here last month of a delegation of Italian students.

After the burning the crowd disappeared.

The burning followed a clash between police and striking students on the college campus, during which fists flew and several were knocked down. Three students were arrested.

BRISK PRIMARY FIGHTS END

Thousands of persons in Fall River, Beverly and Lawrence went to the polls today to nominate nonpartisan candidates for municipal elections next month.

In Lawrence, stirring contests were being climaxed for a number of city posts, but it was an off-year for the mayoralty. Nevertheless about 30,000 were expected to vote.

Fall River had 10 candidates, including City Manager Alexander C. Murray and former Mayor Edmond P. Talbot, seeking the two nominations for the mayoralty election. Six were fighting it out for the same designations in Beverly.

MURRAY, TALBOT LEAD

Murray and Talbot seemed to have the best chances in Fall River, according to predictions. The fact that former Mayor Talbot holds a $5000 a year post as Eastern Massachusetts Railway trustee, however, was being used against him.

William T. Waterhouse was running on stickers in this campaign. Others included Anthony Alves, Attorney John R. Cuttle, John T. Rathe, former Alderman Octave Desmarais, James A. Fitzgerald, Arthur W. Slater and former Representative Thomas Smith, Jr.

EATON VICTORY SEEN

Mayor Paul S. Eaton, seeking reelection in Beverly, seemed assured of a place on the ballot. Two former mayors, however, Parker S. Davis and James A. Torrey, were in the race. Others were Alderman Daniel E. McLean and Willis H. Bell and Attorney Willis W. Lefavour.

In addition to other contests there were 32 candidates for nominations for alderman, at-large and in Wards 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6.

Nine candidates sought nomination as director of public property and parks in Lawrence and 11 were after the nominations for director of health and charities. Twelve were in the school board fight.

State to Restore All Cuts in Pay

Pay cuts amounting to $117,419 monthly will be restored to state employes December 1, following a ruling of Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner.

Cuts of 8 to 10 per cent were voted by the Legislature of 1933. The 1934 Legislature passed a law ending the cuts. Attorney-General Warner ruled that the 1934 act supercedes a provision in the general laws that this year's expenditures shall not be greater than those of 1933.

Two Youths Held on Robbery Charge

Sausage Dishes Are Valuable Addition to Any Menu

By MARTHA LEE

Cool weather makes us think of serving sausage for breakfast, luncheon and dinner. One of the great advantages of it is that it can be cooked so quickly—this fact appeals to the homemaker as well as the business woman.

The question that we are most often asked is how to prevent sausages from breaking open. Sausages in casings should be pricked with a fork before cooking to prevent bursting during cooking.

Sausage can be cooked in a skillet on top of the stove, in a broiling pan in the oven or under the broiler. If cooked in a skillet cook without adding fat for about 15 minutes, turning until brown on all sides.

WELL WITH FRUIT

We prefer baking or broiling the sausage as placing it on a rack allows the extra fat to drip into the pan. Not only is it used in this way but there are innumerable casserole dishes that make whole meals, which are very tasty. Also sausages combine well with fruits. Sausages and apple is traditional—either apple slices or whole baked apples stuffed with sausages. If you never have had broiled sausage and pineapple or sausage and banana do try this at the next grilled meal you prepare.

With vegetables, too, sausage makes an attractive combination. Casserole of sweet potatoes, apple and sausage is a good luncheon dish for a cold day. Or try baked squash with a slice of sausage meat on top and a slice of apple if desired.

Here are some recipes using sausage which we made in our cooking school. They are so good we want to pass them along to you.

ENGLISH CHUTNEY AND SAUSAGE CANAPES

Cut crusts off bread, then cut in strips about two inches wide, chop up chutney and spread on bread. Place on top of chutney one tiny sausage.

PILO

(Sent in by Mrs. Geary)

One fowl (about 3-4 lbs.)
1 pound sausage
1 cup rice

Boil the fowl and the sausages in water enough to cover until the fowl is tender. Remove the fowl and set the stock aside to cool. Remove all the fat and heat to the boiling point. Then add the well washed rice (1 cup to 3 cups of liquid). Cook until the rice is soft, about 15 minutes. Serve hot with the cold sliced chicken.

MEAL IN A CASSEROLE

2 medium-sized onions, sliced thin
4 medium-sized potatoes, sliced very thin
1 No. 2 can (2½ cups) creamy corn
1 pound sausage meat
1 cup canned tomato sauce (thick)
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper and paprika

Grease a casserole and place the ingredients in it in the order given. The sausage is made into balls or patties, then the tomato sauce is poured over all. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 30 minutes. Remove the cover and bake until potatoes are tender and the dish is nicely browned.

TOASTED BACON-APPLE-ONION SANDWICH

Make an apple sauce and season it slightly with cinnamon. Toast bread on one side only. Butter the other side and spread generously with the apple sauce. Add a little finely minced Bermuda onion (or omit onion if desired). Cover with the two strips of bacon and place under the broiler. Broil under a low flame until the bacon curls and the onion browns slightly. Serve as an open sandwich.

SAVORY SAUSAGES AND BEANS

3 sausage patties
1 teaspoon minced onion
2 cups baked beans
1 cup fresh cooked or canned corn

Mince patties and saute with minced onion until patties are crisp and brown. Then add baked beans and corn. Stir until well heated then season as needed, depending upon the seasonings in the beans. Serve with shredded cabbage to which diced tomatoes or chili sauce have been added. (Serves six.)

CURRENT EVENTS

(Lamar Mo. Democrat.)

Rev. Walter Arnold held a brief street meeting on the west side of the square Sunday evening. He had in his hands a circular exploiting bad women in dishabille. He set fire to it and tossed it in a dishpan provided for the occasion. He produced a deck of cards, detached one of the spotted pasteboards, set it on fire, and threw the blazing deuce into the dishpan.

He described picture shows, introducing his remarks by burning a bit of film. It was rather symbolic, however, as he actually set fire to a piece of kodak film.

RAIL HEAD IS HOPEFUL ON FUTURE

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Daniel Willard

Daniel Willard does not share the pessimism of some independent rail observers ... president of the Baltimore & Ohio told stockholders of his road that they may look hopefully toward the future. While Mr. Willard could hardly be said to view the increase rails seek in rates, as a consequence of higher costs, with equanimity, he introduced a note of hope by saying that the burden on carriers will be lightened if and when business activity develops. The Baltimore & Ohio head also sees the rail carriers co-operating with other transportation services and furnishing co-ordinated service cheaper and better than any other country in the world.

* * *

Notes: The reference to co-operative transportation is pleasing . . . Because it undoubtedly means that the cost of all things in the future will be brought lower through economy of distribution . . . Let's hope that the rail shares absorb some of Mr. Willard's enthusiasm . . . Then we may get a real market in the next few weeks . . . And the rails will be our choice of the two big groups . . . As traders have not exploited them at all and there is plenty of room for a good upswing . . . Of the special groups we choose paints, leathers, textiles, alcohols and packers.

* * *

Taken as a whole the textiles have had a rather rough year of it. Profits in most cases probably will not exceed those of 1933 by a great amount. Next year however, we expect much better things. The old story that textiles have good operating results every other year is not so far fetched. And if this again proves true in 1935 the buyer wishing to be in at the right time must do his purchasing now. As the first quarter is usually the best. That is the reason textile issues will feature the daily stock analysis this week.

* * *

Shorts: During near-term weakness we will favor Amoskeag, Pacific Mills and American Woolen . . . All three are prominent New England companies and with the better results of the last two years as a backlog could really do well in 1935 with any sort of decent business . . . Cannon Mills is another issue that will not be without friends in a mill stock market . . . The coal shares, noted here previously, are not getting off to a very fast start, but may trace this to the too mild weather . . . And the forecasts of a cold winter still hold.

* * *

One of the most important advisory services in New York has altered its attitude towards the market. While bullishness has been its theme for quite a while there has been no disposition to consider the market in a definite uptrend. Today advices received by the writer are to the effect that a definite turn has taken place and the list will only experience a technical correction of a few points. It also suggested that an additional backing and filling movement of four or five sessions might take the place of a reaction.

* * *

Briefs: For our hypothetical position we will wait the four or five sessions suggested above . . . Then, regardless of whether the list has traveled sidewise or reacted we will leave the sidelines . . . The issues above cover the general lineup of the groups we will buy . . . This is not to forget the steels which were suggested a few days ago . . . One of the cheerful notes in trade and business reviews is the activity in tool and die shops . . . As well as general machinery . . . These two may present other chances for us later on.

Market Is Acting A Little Tired Says Spectator

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

The market is beginning to act a little tired. The boys held stocks up very nicely while the utilities were being hammered but the strain seems to be beginning to tell.

Furthermore, it's becoming monotonous to see the same stocks being whirled up while the rest of the market is muddling around. A mild correction at this time wouldn't do any harm and might clear the speculative atmosphere a little.

The plight of some of the big utility holders is beginning to attract attention.

Prominent families like the Bradys have for years been the big interests in Consolidated Gas, and some tidy fortunes have dwindled unless changes were made in the last year or two.

Then there are the huge holding companies like United Corp. and Electric Bond & Share that have vast stakes in many of the country's biggest power and light systems . . . present prices of utilities to many have gone beyond the point of just paper losses, for it's a long road back.

Some of the would-be-bulls are still upset by failure of commodities to snap out of their lethargy.

But they forget grains, cotton and other staples had a boom of their own earlier in the year when stocks were being kicked all over the lot . . . Smart people say commodities are high enough here for a big rise in business . . .

Rails aren't getting any help from traffic statistics. Eastern roads should make a relatively better showing than the Western ones for a while, particularly when the auto industry gets into volume production again.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE MIXED

Shares were irregular in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Trading was moderate.

Bigelow Sanford and Sullivan Machine were up about 1, while United Fruit gained nearly 1. American Telephone was active and strong, gaining more than a point.

Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred lost 2 while Atchison was down a major fraction and American Woolen, New Haven, Pennsylvania Railroad and United Shoe lost fractionally.

Daily Stock Analysis

COMPANY—Amoskeag Manufacturing. One of the foremost New England textile manufacturers. Making ginghams, flannels, toweling, ticks, denims, worsted dress goods and rayon goods. Company also a pioneer in making writing paper from cotton fabric.

CAPITALIZATION—Consists of $11,463,300 in funded debt and 365,977 no par common shares. Relatively heavy funded debt item is nicely counter balanced by strong financial condition consisting of $1,[illegible] in cash and $8,937,000 in inventories, with liabilities of only $1,[illegible].

EARNINGS— No line on 1934 earnings available at this writing and a too optimistic view is not warranted. In 1934 company reported a net income for the first time in four years. Independent observers are looking beyond all this to 1935. Conservatively bullish estimates are heard.

DIVIDENDS—No payment has been made since 1930 when one dollar a share was declared. The near term does not promise great things in this direction. As better times spread, and it is possible for company to get a clearer view of picture, stock holders may hope for fairly liberal treatment.

COMMENT—Common shares of Amoskeag are probably a long term speculation of a somewhat radical order. But the saying that every other year is a textile year would mean that 1935 will find the company doing well. In such an event it seems reasonable to look for better market prices on cheerful operations reports.

Irregular Tone in Dealings on Curb

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 20—The curb market continued to show an unsettled tone today, with renewed liquidation in the utilities influencing irregularity in other sections of the list.

Electric Bond & Share was again dumped in large volume, although it met support at yesterday's low of 7⅛, off ¼ from its previous close. American Gas & Electric, Brazil Traction and Northern States Power A were other power and light issues to decline fractionally.

General Tire and Rubber was a sensational performer in a mixed specialty group, soaring almost 6 points to 68¼. Lerner Stores, Greyhound, and Swift and Company also were firmer, as against losses up to a point in Glen Alden Coal, and Jones and Laughlin steel.

Metals were easier with New Jersey Zinc off ⅛ at 56¼, and Hudson Bay down ⅛ at 11⅞.

Oils held narrowly, with International Petroleum and Standard of Kentucky up nominally, against a slight setback in Creole.

Investment trusts and alcohols were dull and little changed.

WALL ST. SEEKS ONLY LARGE ACCOUNTS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service.

New York, Nov. 20. After its limited experiment in seeming mass patronage, Wall Street of late has definitely gone professional again.

M. S. Rukeyser

Security vendors, instead of reaching out for a clientele of a large number of individual investors and speculators, are now laying their plans especially to appeal to the professional, institutional buyers.

The placing privately last week of an $18,000,000 issue of the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Company to a group of life insurance companies is an incident in the new trend.

The current fashion is the result of changes during the depression in public opinion and in federal legislation.

By placing an issue privately, rather than publicly, the issuers seek to escape the need of filing a registration statement.

But other factors are at work.

* * *

Brokers and dealers found amateur customers resentful in a period of wholesale price declines.

Moreover, many vendors, steeped in old-fashioned tradition, never successfully solved the riddle of getting operating costs down sufficiently to sell successfully to the small man.

In effect, this new emphasis on a professional market is a throwback to pre-war conditions, when the savings of the broad public were tapped indirectly through the savings banks and life insurance companies, instead of directly through the absorption of stocks and bonds.

* * *

The Liberty Loan campaigns, which made millions of new investors, broke with the old traditions.

At this juncture, when politicians seek to deify the little man, Wall Street in its newest phase has tended to turn away from him.

Most fiduciary institutions do not want living or testamentary trusts of less than $100,000—and large institutions will not accept trusts of less than $50,000.

Likewise, the reputable firms in the fast growing new profession of investment counsel do not solicit accounts of less than $100,000.

* * *

There are some practical limits to the professional market.

Institutional buyers have been curtailed by the new banking legislation, which ordered the divorcement of security affiliates of banks.

To make up for this loss, numerous bankers urge that commercial banks be permitted to engage in true underwriting in the British sense, that is, to contract to buy a stipulated number of shares or bonds of a new issue if they are not otherwise subscribed for.

Bond Market Is Lower in Dull Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 20—Over the entire domestic bond list today there was a reflection of a decidedly narrow buying interest. Some of the corporate issues managed to hold around the previous finals, but the majority of low-priced classifications were inclined to droop. Utility loans continued to lack support.

U S. governments traveled a little further in the reactionary trend which developed in the late trading yesterday. Slipping off 2-32nd to 5-32nd of a point Home Owners' Loan 3s sold at 98.28; 4s at 100.2; Federal Farm 3s at 98.25; Treasury 4¼s-3¼s, 101.25, Treasury 4¼s of 1952, 111.26; 3s of 1951-55, 100.6. Federal Farm 3¼ and Liberty 4th 4¼s made small gains.

At losses ranging to around a point American Smelting & Refining 5s were traded at 106⅛, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 51⅝, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, 81⅛; Detroit Edison 4½s 106⅛; Erie 5s 67, North American 5s, 82; Postal Telegraph 5s, 42⅛; Shell Union Oil 5s, 102⅞; Standard Oil of New York 4½s, 102½, and Western Union 5s, 83.

SHARES HEAVY NEAR CLOSE OF TRADING

New York, Nov. 20—The stock market was generally reactionary today as weakness in grains induced some speculative selling and caused losses running to more than a point.

A substantial portion of the selling which was evident from the opening represented profit-taking on the part of traders who were discouraged by the market's failure to work into new high ground following last week's strength.

RAILS LOWER

Utility shares were again beset by liquidation with Consolidated Gas and North American and United Gas, improvement establishing new record lows, while Public Service of N. J., duplicated its low. American Telephone, though, moved counter to the trend finishing higher.

Railroad shares also displayed a heavy tone, with losses running to more than a point. Atchison ran into considerable selling shortly after the noon hour, dropping more than a point, and unsettled the other carrier shares.

United States Steel held in a narrow range and proved a steadying influence on the other industrial shares.

Mining stocks were quiet and neglected today. Chemicals were dull and lower, as were the farm implement and mail order shares in sympathy with wheat, which dropped 2 cents a bushel.

Oils, liquors and specialties were dull and sluggish.

ASSURES BUSINESS

The rally of the traction group reflected reports of an imminent unification agreement. The oils were almost at a standstill and the metals seemed to lack any stimulus, inflationary or otherwise.

The speech of Donald R. Richberg, executive director of the National Emergency Council, assuring business that there would be no "orgy of inflation," was pleasing to banking circles, but not helpful to the speculative forces which have been conducting their operations on the theory that drastic currency expansion is a foregone conclusion.

At the same time, serious attention was given to the Richberg warning that private enterprise "must bring about the re-employment of four or five million workers in the near future" either through the substantial growth of industry generally "or through further government activities."

Nothwithstanding the intermittent tendencies displayed by various equity groups, most market commentators were still moderately bullish. These pointed out that the friendlier spirit of the Administration toward industry as a whole, the plans of co-operation by business with recovery units, and the slow but consistent advance in the business pace, provided the background for constructive activities.

General American Trans. Earnings

General American Transportation Corp. will complete shipments on its 2000-car order from Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad before end of the year.

Billings for the fourth quarter likely will run higher than expected earlier, indicating fairly good results for the final period from car building. However, it appears the company continues to look to its car-leasing division for the bulk of its business.

Earlier estimates that the company would earn $3 per share or more for the year appear to be borne out by the trend of shipments to the C. & O., $2.29 a share on the 818,203 shares having been earned in nine months ended with September.

Foreign Exchange

New York, Nov. 20 (AP)—Foreign exchange steady; Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain demand, 4.98⅝; cables, 4.98⅝; 60-day bills, 4.97¾. France demand, 6.59⅛; cables, [illegible]. Italy demand, 8.53; cables, [illegible]

Sport and Its Dividing Line Between Honesty And False Intention

The All-America Racket
Jerry Sells Shares
Harvard's Big Chance

By AUSTEN LAKE

Austen Lake

THE SPORT BUSINESS PRODUCES many guard-house, or shower bath lawyers who claim everything and admit nothing, and it is often impossible to trace the thin dividing line between what is honest and heinous intent.

The prize fighters jab with thumb and elbow, or whip the laces of their gloves across an opponent's face, which no mortal referee can tell whether the act is mere sporting abandon or a sinister desire to commit mayhem.

The baseball pitchers still throw bean balls in which the question of a slip of the hand or malicious wish to flatten the batter is between the pitcher and his God, pastor or any other confidant. The football players clout and swing their heels, whether to remove a rival from their path or from the game with permanent injury.

And so, the social-register horse people of Boston, when they framed their racing bill some months ago, professed only the desire to improve the strain of the animals by perfect breeding, and to stimulate sweet, clean contests between their steeds' wind and limb. Which now turns out to be secondary to their desire to cut themselves a large slice of cake from the public betting funds, like any other swipe behind the barn.

Improving the horse strain is essentially an aftermath of the desire to win races and cash betting stubs. Just as, during the prohibition era, the rum runners developed speedy motor craft. Not because they loved the feel of salt spray on their kissers, or thrilled to the throb of a 12-cylinder, but because they cherished their cargo of stimulants and wanted to keep their pants out of jail.

THE COLLEGE PRESS BUREAUS around the country are poking up the football editors with All-America propaganda. George Washington "U" has printed up a flyer with cartoons and black face type, recommending "Tuffy" Leemans for All-America halfback. Ohio State is circularizing the name of Regis Monahan, a guard. Louisiana State sends out a tasty folder on Abe Mikal, the fullback.

Perhaps three score other colleges are mailing out similar propaganda for their candidates, knowing that the more din of publicity the more chance of making the grade.

All-America honors have advertising value to the college, draw more material from the schoolboy ranks and tickle alumni interest and donations. Hence the All-America, which used to be an honor unsolicited, is now becoming a racket.

JERRY GIANFERANTE IS THE GOLF professional at the Minute Man Country Club of Lexington. Like most minor club pros, Jerry is not blessed with much spare cash. But he makes up in ambition what he lacks in riches.

Just now Jerry wants to go down to Miami, to the big Open tourney on Dec. 8, feeling that he might win a chunk of the $2500 capital prize. His club members are buying shares in his prospects at $10 each, 35 shares in all, with the understanding that half of what Jerry wins, if any, goes to himself. The other half will be split 35 ways and paid to his personal stock holders.

WHEN, A SHORT TIME AGO, a B. C. High lad wound up his Sunday punch and let Referee Al McCoy, who is also Northeastern's competent football coach, have it flush on the chin, McCoy, who is a husky, strapping man, merely pinioned the boy's arms until his heat had subsided.

Afterward Art McManus, B. C. High coach, brought the boy into the room where McCoy's split lip was being treated. The lad, shamefaced, mumbled an apology.

"Son," said McCoy seriously, "if my split lip teaches you a lasting lesson in fairness and sportsmanship, the punch was worthwhile."

WHEN THE LATE BILL WRIGLEY was founding his great chewing gum enterprise, he brought out a package of little sugar-coated globules which he called "P. K.'s" in honor of his son, Paul K. Wrigley.

Lately Paul, who was never a baseball addict during his father's life and devoted his time entirely to the gum business, developed into an enthusiastic fan, having recently accepted the presidency of the Cubs.

Yet three years ago, when he made one of his rare visits to the park, a gate keeper refused to let him pass on his face and ordered a policeman to shoo him away as a loiterer and a gate crasher.

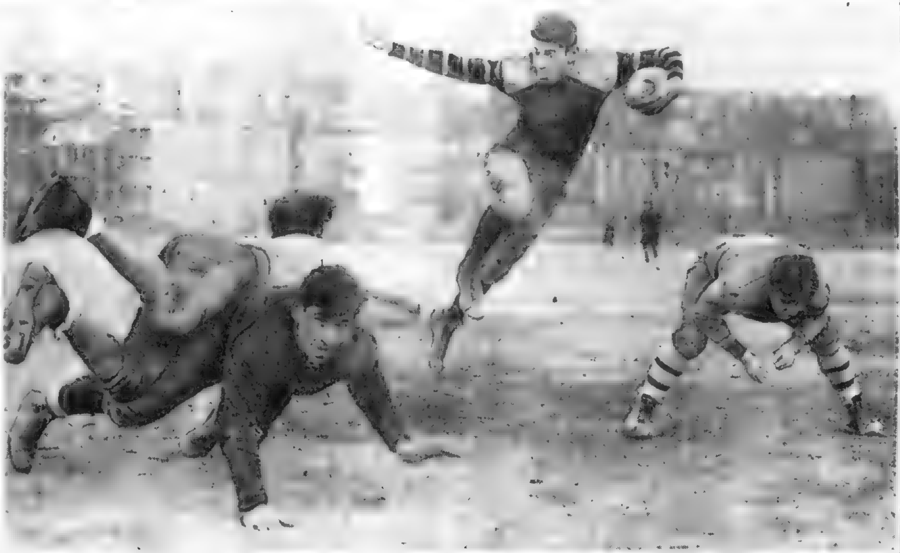
I COUNT HARVARD'S FOOTBALL CHANCE against Yale next Saturday as 50 per cent improved since Yale's 11 iron men defeated Princeton in what is the season's outstanding upset. Because, to do that, Yale must have been thoroughly "needled" by their coaches, i. e., built up to a state of nervous frenzy.

Nervous keying for objective games is a familiar habit among coaches, who whip their lads into a lather during the week before the big game. But it never fails to have a compensating aftermath of collapse. Once exhausted, an athlete's nervous reserve recovers slowly, not in a single week, or even two, but gradually, bit by bit, over a month's time.

I suspect that Yale spent too much of its reserve against Princeton to come back to normal in time for Harvard. And Harvard, even with its sub-calibre man power, may tune itself up to a concert pitch that will knock Yale kicking and further astonish the football world in this daffiest of all seasons.

He Flies Through the Air With the Greatest of Ease, That Red Devil—



Exactly like the daring young man of flying trapeze fame does Nechtem, Chelsea high quarterback, float through the air. It's easy for him, this or any other grid feat despite the efforts of his teammates shown here to block him. Nechtem first grabbed the spotlight as a member of the Red Devils basketball team. He's fully as capable a gridman. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

Minus the services of Charlie Sands, the ex-Maple Leaf who made such a favorable impression with the fans on his initial home appearance, the Bruins clash with the fast-stepping Detroit Red Wings tonight at Boston Garden.

Sands was injured in the St Louis game. He was X-rayed by Dr Martin J. Crotty the Bruins' physician, who announced that Charlie had wrenched some shoulder ligaments and would be out of the lineup for a week or 10 days

The Sands accident is a blow to the Bruins as well as to the player himself. Charlie was at the peak of his game and fighting to show the folks in the Queen City that Connie Smythe pulled one when he let him out.

The Bruins hold a decision over the Red Wings, having tipped Smiling Jack Adams' charges over, 4 to 2, 10 days ago in Detroit. The defeat did not set well with the Red Wings and they are out to square matters tonight.

A year ago the Bruins took only one game in six starts from the Wings, but Manager Frank Patrick feels he has a system to pick up many points at the expense of Detroit.

Bruins and Detroit are tied with Chicago in a three cornered first place deadlock. As the Black hawks are idle tonight, the winner of the Garden game will step out in front

Chelsea High Hitches Self to Star, Sol Nechtem, and Up She Goes

By Bill Connell

Red Devils of the scholastic sport world. Chelsea boys this year have pounded along toward the front rank of the football parade

The school was noted as a basketball center for many years, but only during the past two campaigns has the team shown marked football ability

There were several reasons for this including woeful lack of facilities. The squad was forced to practice on rock ribbed gridirons and play every game on foreign fields

Frank Garvey took up the coaching grind in 1927, and Chelsea's rise dated from that period Results were not great for a few seasons Then Garvey's work began to tell

Last year he had the brilliant back, Arigo La Tanzi, for a headliner, and the team attracted much attention. This fall only one game has been lost, largely due to the presence of another standout gridman, Quarterback Sol Nechtem

Nechtem, a great basketball player, probably can do more things well than any other back of the year. He blocks, carries, tackles, throws and receives passes, punts, placekicks in preference to drop-kicking at which he is very capable, and receives punts

No doubt much of his ball handling comes from basketball. He can catch punts on the dead run, from any angle and his fielding average is 1.000. While he weighs only 155 minus equipment, and is tall and slim, he has unusual stamina, and is in there from start to finish.

Nechtem calls the signals cannily for halfbacks Henry Effron, 155, a junior, running and blocking back; Ben Mugford, 160, a fine blocker; John Cecere, 145, very fast running back; and fullback Felix Rovinski, 175, plunger and defensive ace. Cecere and Mugford are alternated at left half

Savosik, Sherr, Spicer, Hovasse and Rudziak from the line, and Nechtem are veterans of the team. An able eleven is this Red Devil group, which trailed Lynn Classical by a touchdown in the opener only to be awarded that game on forfeit later on; then bowed to powerful Medford, upset Leominster, tied Somerville scoreless, beat Worcester Trade, Winthrop and Lowell to amass a record of only one defeat to date against very strong opposition.

The coming Saturday Chelsea goes to Peabody, and the Thanksgiving game is at Everett. With the latter game the constant traveling to other fields will be ended.

For Carter Field, broad expanse of concrete-like ground, is being transformed into one of the finest school stadiums in the land. U S funds are paying for the labor and Chelsea for the material.

The result will be a gridiron with concrete stands having a 5500 seating capacity; a quarter mile cinder track, with 220-yard straightaway, and first class locker room and shower facilities under one of the stands

Seven of the current varsity graduate, but Alpert, Rudziak, Rovinski, Effron, Mugford and the subs will be back to enjoy the new field

The following members of the squad of 50 have been seeing service: Manny Abrams, Harry Dillon, Andrew Cornechuk, ends, Frank Kalwar and Tom White, tackles, Fred Lake, center and guard; Martin McCarthy (180-pound junior — watch him next year), guard; Irv Croll and Frank Walters, backs.

Al Pierotti assists Coach Garvey, and Henry McCarthy also aids with the grid teaching The seconds, playing a regular schedule, lost to Everett, tied Malden, downed Revere, Somerville and Medford, so that the varsity should get some good replacement material from the jayvees next fall.

Jamaica Faces Brighton

Jamaica was a slight favorite Brighton, with Emilio Pessa and Jim Hickman in action with the backs, expected to make the game very close

Tilden and Vines Win in England

London, Nov. 20 (US)—William T. Tilden and Ellsworth Vines scored impressive victories in the professional lawn tennis championship tournament n Wembley Stadium here.

Tilden vanquished Daniel Maskell, of England, coach of the victorious British Davis cup team, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4. Vines defeated Martin Plaa, brilliant French pro, 7—5, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Hans Nuslein, of Germany, world professional champion, also advanced, conquering Bruce Barnes of the United States, 6—2, 6—0, 6—4.

EAGLE ICE MEN IN FIRST DRILL

Captain Frank Liddell will lead 40 or more candidates for the Boston College hockey team onto the ice of the Arena tonight in the first practice for the Eagles.

Four veterans and a likely looking crop of sophomore talent have reported for the team.

Among the opponents will be B. U., M. I. T., Northeastern and Brown

The Eagle pucksters will practice three times a week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 7

AL FRIEDMAN IS KILLED BY HIT-AND-RUN

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, Nov. 20—Al Friedman, 29, once a leading figure in the heavyweight boxing ranks, died early today at the General Hospital from injuries suffered when struck Sunday night by a hit-and-run driver in Hollywood.

Friedman, who was a native of Roslindale, Mass., and did most of his fighting around Boston, had engaged as a boxing instructor at the Hollywood Y. M. C. A. since coming to the Coast. He had fought many of the top ranking contenders in the heavyweight division. A widow and a three-year-old [illegible] survive

Friedman Won Fame in Foreign Rings

A man of a thousand ring wars is a title that can easily be bestowed on Al Friedman

Although born in the South End of Boston 29 years ago and christened Elmer, Al had to go into foreign fields to fight his way to ring fame and fortune, and then returned to the Hub to win the acclaim he deserved

Al received his early education in the Hyde Park schools and graduated from that high school. He never won fame on any of the athletic teams, but practiced daily with the football or baseball squads. It was to Leo Daley, then coach at the high school, that Al first confided his ambition to enter the ring Daley encouraged him, even going so far as to be the first to put on the gloves with the Jewish lad

Shortly after his graduation, Al entered the amateur ranks, and to say he was a success would be putting it very mildly. When he found the pure ranks held no more foes to conquer, he decided to cast his lot with the pros, but here he met his first disappointment in his avowed ambition to climb the heights

Try as he might, he couldn't break into Boston circles. So he decided to leave here and try his luck in hostile rings. And it proved to be the right step. In 15 months in the ring he fought 60 bouts and earned $60,000, fighting such topnotchers as Tuffy Griffiths, Babe Hunt, Jack Gagnon, Earnie Schaaf, Dick Daniels and Jack Renault.

While fighting in Chicago Al met the girl he married.

In January, 1931, Al announced his retirement from the ring to continue his plans for a self-education, with the burning hope of some day receiving a college degree

His manner of speech and his amazing knowledge of important subjects, along with his success in the ring, had won him a legion of admirers, and they all wished him luck on his departure from the squared circle.

'FORGOTTEN MEN' MAY UPSET ELIS

There's a tradition that started away back when Harvard and Yale were just starting their annual fall warfare, which states that past performances mean absolutely nothing when the Crimson and Blue meet.

Another which has kept pace with it during the years is that some comparative unknown shall bound into the limelight by bringing victory to his colors.

Neither tradition should be broken this week-end when the teams clash in the Bowl.

Harvard will be the underdog, because of Yale's startling upset of Princeton

Harvard isn't being given a look in. Neither was Yale against Princeton. So the old underdog tradition may strut its stuff on Saturday

If it does, it'll be because the second tradition is also repeating, and one or two of the "forgotten men" on the Crimson squad are making good where the headliners failed.

WATT AND PARQUETTE

While Yale is watching Bob Haley, Fred Moseley, and Don Jackson, Harvard's starting offensive aces, there's a fourth man in the backfield, whom the Elis can't afford to overlook.

He's a young sophomore, Bill Watt from Larchmont, N. Y., whose play has become as "hot" as his firey red hair.

Master Watt is used mainly to clear the way for Moseley and Haley. But on occasions he has shown an aptitude for lugging the pigskin, and Saturday may be just such an occasion.

Buried away on Harvard's third string backfield, there's another youngster who is even smaller than Watt

He's Billy Parquette, who is listed on the Harvard squad roster as weighing 138 pounds, but probably doesn't top that weight in his full playing outfit.

It can be Parquette who'll provide the thunder that will upset Yale, for he possesses in his right arm the craft to out-do even Yale's greatest passer in years, Jerry Roscoe

But the lad on whom Harvard is depending to spring the big surprise is Johnny Adzigian, chunky 150-pound halfback, who didn't begin to come until last week when the Crimson massacred New Hampshire

Adzigian, like Tommy Bilodeau, the sophomore field general, has been handicapped all season by a late start. He returned from Japan two weeks after the Crimson squad had reported for conditioning and on the eve of the opening game.

TO PLAY MAJOR ROLE

Today he carries no listing. He's merely the 12th man on the Harvard team, the fifth member of the backfield, the position once held by Fergy Locke. Unlike Locke, Adzigian is no specialist. He's a chunky solid athlete, who takes his turn at blocking, as well as kicking or passing, or rushing himself.

He hits harder than any of the Harvard backs. But it's his ability to throw a running pass that may make him invaluable to the Crimson on Saturday. In the open field, he's as shifty and surefooted as a mountain goat

He isn't likely to start against Yale, with Fred Moseley fit for play at left halfback. But Yale is sure to see more than enough of him before the game is over.

EVERY MAN ON TUFTS SQUAD READY FOR WINDUP WITH STATE

Merry Jesters of Diamond Dissolve Long Partnership as Al Schacht Leaves Senators to Coach Red Sox

For all of his clowning, Schacht is a smart baseball man and a valuable coach. He has been of invaluable aid to Joe Cronin when the boy wonder drove the Senators to a World Series, and he was equally valuable to Bucky Harris when that then boy wonder piloted the Nats to American League triumphs in 1924 and 1925.

Schacht and his partner, Nick Altrock, have been the outstanding clown team of the diamond for more than a decade. But this long partnership will be broken this season with Schacht moving out of the Capitol to the Fenway as Cronin's aide. Here the pair are shown putting on their "act" for the delight of the customers.

Ugh and double ugh, Schacht seems to say, as he samples one of the graying Altrock's powder puff lefts right in the bread basket. This was but one of the many burlesques the jesters staged prior to a ball game. Recognize the third man? None other than Art Shires, who played for the Nats for a short term.

"I accept the nomination," Al says in his best campaign manner. The Merry Andrew of Baseball has togged himself out in frock coat and high hat and is giving one of his voluminous speeches, which, boiled down, mean nothing, to the pew tenants at one of the Senator games. Now Schacht will bring his clownings to the Yawkey yard.

Jerry Ginley Returns to Action at Tufts

By Walter Kiley

Back in 1927, when Arthur Sampson was coaching Tufts' football, the Jumbos went through an undefeated season. Lew Manly, present head coach at Medford, was assistant. Now Manly stands an excellent chance to duplicate the feat, with Mass. State the only obstacle to be overcome.

Perhaps the biggest satisfaction to Manly as he anticipates Saturday's finale is the fact that the team which started the season against Colby is intact. And Roy Woodworth, Tufts' most capable tackle, who wasn't available at the time, is also on hand.

Jerry Ginley, who was hurt in the New Hampshire game, was given the official O. K. by the medico today.

BORDEN RETURNS

So as Tufts takes to the Oval gridiron in its most important objective, the lineup will be: Oliver and Grinnell, ends; Woodworth and Fox, tackles; Ginley and Rendall, tackles; Carlyn, center; MacLean, quarterback; Captain Froehlich, fullback; Hingston and Keith, halfbacks.

The return of Ollie Borden to the backfield has added strength. Naturally with a winning combination, Manly is keeping his quartet intact.

But using Borden in a reserve capacity to spell his regulars, the speedy blond Medford junior has aided the cause despite the fact that both last year and this fall he broke the same ankle and was never again expected to play football.

Unfortunately a mental lapse on Borden's part put Bowdoin in a position to score the only touchdown of the year against Tufts.

Ollie tried to pick up a rolling punt with several tacklers in his vicinity. The inevitable followed.

He fumbled, and, instead of it being Tufts' ball on its own 25-yard line, it was Bowdoin's.

A pass and several line plunges overcame stubborn defensive play, and the score was registered, with the 210-pound fullback, Baravelis, being rushed in on fourth down to push the ball across.

NONE TOO OPTIMISTIC

Manly is loathe to predict the outcome of Saturday's game.

"We have been through a gruelling schedule, and the boys are pretty well used up.

"Whether or not we win against Mass State depends greatly on condition. We have been forced to stick to our first team almost entirely. In most of our games we used 12 to 14 players. On the other hand, Mass State has piled up big early leads, so that it could pull its regulars out and rest them up.

"State is the highest scoring team we have played all year. In Stuart, it has the most dangerous passer we have faced.

"This 175-pound back is the principal reason for the success of the team. He is a good kicker and runner as well. Al McCoy of Northeastern could tell how good he is. He had a great day against the Huskies."

Be that as it may, all of Greater Boston is pulling for Tufts to wind up undefeated. Such a victory would bring some slight glory to these parts, which has been disappointed in the showing of its leading football teams.

Migneault Meets Tracey at Lynn

Bud Migneault of Bridgewater and Buck Tracey of Everett will clash in the feature ten round bout at the Lynn Sports Arena tonight.

These two light, heavyweights have beaten most of the boys in their class around these parts, and a bangup fight should be on tap.

In the semifinal, Al Morosis of the U. S. S. Mojave will swap punches with Paul Chute, ex-New England amateur champion. Morosis is out to erase the decision Chute gained on him while both were in the amateurs. There will be three other four round bouts.

Lead Hockey Scorers

Chuck Conacher and Harvey Jackson, both of Toronto, and Johnny Sorrell, Detroit, registered five points each during the first week of play to lead the National Hockey League in scoring.

TROJANS BOW TO BROOKLYN, 25 TO 31

By Bob Ahearn

It was the same old story. Boston Trojans led at the end of the first period in their basket game with the Visitations, only to lose out 31 to 25 before 3000 fans at the Arena.

It has been that way in all their games to date.

From the start of the second stanza to the finish, the visitors clicked resonantly. Their passing game was far more accurate than the Trojans' and they FOLLOWED up their shots.

When a Trojan shot from midfloor, not a team mate was under the basket to get the rebound. Many follow-up shots were lost, and a chance to win their first American League victory went up in smoke.

Happy Riley, smiling Irish lad acquired from the Visitations recently, seems certain of a starting nomination. Playing guard in the final stanza, Riley accounted for four points and was a bulwark on defense.

Carl Johnson, Brooklyn guard, was high scorer of the game, sinking five baskets from the floor and three from the foul line for a total of 13 points. He was closely followed by Nat Hickey of the Trojans and Milton Trupin, the visitors' brilliant forward, who each accounted for 11 points.

One Time When Laugh Was Turned on Schacht

Local Comedian Had Al Driven from Ball Game at Fenway

By Joe Cashman

Now that Al Schacht, a Hebrew from New York's East Side, comes to join Joe Cronin, an Irishman from Frisco's distant slopes, as a member of the Red Sox new brain trust, can't you hear the Hot Stove League crying for fuel in the form of humorous incidents in the career of the famed comedian-coach?

This envoy can. And, always accomodating, he's harkening.

This entire page wouldn't suffice to set down half the mirth-provoking acts originated by Schacht, with or without the assistance of Nick Altrock, so this contribution will be confined to the biggest laugh Al every helped hand us.

It was at Fenway Park, Al's new home, in the first inning of a Sox-Senators game a few years back. Al was coaching the Solons from third base.

Suddenly, a gentleman oozing authority paraded down the steps of the Washington dugout looking for Manager Harris.

"I'm Manager Harris," piped up 'Bucky' rather sharply, "but I'm not permitted to have visitors on the bench during a game. What can I do for you?"

"I'm Inspector So-and-So of the Boston Police Department," the stranger explained. "I'm on special detail acting as bodyguard to a visiting Italian Count, who is up in the stands.

"This is the first time he has seen a ball game and, knowing nothing about the sport, he's taking violent exception to the catcalling of that guy coaching at third. He considers it an insult to his dignity or something, as far as I can gather from his broken English.

"I tried to tell him it was all part of the game, but either he doesn't understand or he won't listen. He's threatening to complain to the Italian ambassador if the noise doesn't cease."

Harris had called him in, explained the situation and told him to take the afternoon off.

"I noticed that bird," Al remarked before leaving the bench. "He's sitting in a front row box and flashing a red satin sash across his bosom. Lucky he doesn't attend many Senators' games or Mrs. Schacht's son would be among the unemployed."

And that was that, until Washington's next visit to the Fens, when Schacht came running to Harris before the first game.

"Not more than 2500," Al estimated, "but among them is that Italian Count who got me an afternoon off the last time we were here. Only this time he's sitting alone in the unreserved section, and he's lost his sash. I suspect a nigger in the woodpile."

Schacht heartily enjoyed the laugh even though it was at his own expense. That's one of his redeeming virtues. He can take as well as give. Except when it comes to giving credit to his old partner, Nick Altrock.

The venerable Nicodemus and Al have been putting on their side-splitting antics for more than a decade, but they haven't spoken to one another for several years.

Altrock was famous as a comedian years before Schacht came up to the majors as a second-rate pitcher, but Al was responsible for many of the laughs the pair have caused in recent seasons.

Everybody will admit that Schacht is funny, but there is a wide difference of opinion as to his ability as a coach.

Cronin thinks Al is in a class by himself as a lieutenant. The first wish the boy pilot expressed on being signed by the Sox was that he might bring his old Washington side-kick here.

On the other hand, "Bucky" Harris, who returns to the capital as manager, thinks that, as a coach, Al is a first class giggle manufacturer.

"He supplies plenty of laughs for the customers, but those funny guys are a handicap to a ball club to my way of thinking," we heard "Bucky" opine while watching Al at the Fens one day last summer.

So it's as fortunate for Schacht that Cronin likes him as it is that there isn't an "Italian Count" out to listen to his daily whistle.

AL MERCIER EMITS YELP

Claiming that Bob "Bibber" McCoy from Holy Cross and Al Morelli from Boston College have "too much in common," Al Mercier today squawked loudly against Morelli refereeing when he clashes with McCoy in defense of his N. E. heavyweight championship in the feature of Alex MacLean's wrestling show tomorrow night at the Boston Arena.

Mercier was on hand when McCoy beat O'Dell at the Arena last week with Morelli refereeing, and is of the opinion tht Morelli helped McCoy to victory by knocking O'Dell out of the ring with a stiff right-hand punch when O'Dell failed to obey orders.

The N. E. mat champ feels he can beat McCoy with a square deal from the third man even though McCoy rules a slight favorite to win the clash for the crown and $500 diamond-studded belt held by Mercier.

Their bout, a battle of flying tackles vs. drop-kicks, will be two falls out of three looms as an even more spectacular melee than their first meeting.

The simifinal will bring together Rebel Rob Russell and Fred Carone. A big feature will be the battle royal among four masked marvels with a masked referee the fifth man.

In special bouts Jim Wallis will meet Tommy Rae while Bull Komar will face John "Whiskers" Maloney.

There should be plenty of hilarity and damage when the bulgy Komar, the matman with no neck, meets the stringy, bearded Maloney.

BASKET SCHOOL AT Y. M. C. A. NEXT WEEK

Representatives of the Eastern Massachusetts Board of Basketball Officials will be instructors in the second Basketball Officials Institute, to be held at the Boston Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening, November 27, and Thursday, December 6, at 7:15 o'clock.

Last year's school was so successful that the Y. M. C. A. physical directors decided to hold another this year to instruct, coach and help young men and leaders of boys' clubs to referee basketball games more efficiently.

A presentation of rules, duties of officials, violations and penalties will be given next Tuesday. Students attending this institute will have an opportunity to referee in a demonstration game and have their work appraised.

Tech Boxing Team to Meet Rutgers

For the first time in Tech's history, the Engineer boxing team will exchange blows with Rutgers, according to Manager Horner who has just completed arrangements for the meeting.

The trip to New Brunswick, N. J., will take place early in February. After the combat the Engineers will go on to Washington, D. C. to face Catholic University.

Joe Handrahan, Dartmouth, Eligible for Princeton Game

Ellinger Rates Hull Boy Best Guard He Has Ever Seen

Colleges in Broadcast Ban—Major Murphy Helps St. Anselm's

By Bill Grimes

Harvard is not doing any grieving over the columns of publicity the Yale "Iron Men" are receiving for knocking Princeton out of the undefeated and untied class. In fact, the Crimson is strong for the campaign and is hoping that it carries through the entire week. After taking a supposedly unbeatable team, Yale will prove the exception if it does not underrate Harvard.

Ducky Pond has met with unexpected success at New Haven, but his real test is to send his Elis into the Harvard game in the proper frame of mind. There is bound to be a let down among the Yale players. If it is of sufficient depth, Harvard has an outside chance to pull the unexpected. For the hunch players—Yale has slumped on alternate weeks since the Brown game.

Now that Dartmouth has lost most of its ball team, Joe Handrahan has been declared eligible. Fortunately Joe has been practicing daily with the scrubs, and he will be assigned to one of the guard berths for the Princeton game . . The Tigers will see a guard in Joe the likes of which they, or no other club, have met this season. Harry Ellinger has been studying line play for years and he declares that Joe Handrahan is the greatest guard he has ever seen . . . The Handrahan family comprises a large percentage of the winter population of Kenberma. When Joe Sr., started to populate the "Beach," his house was a two story affair back of the telephone office. As the family increased he added stories to his dwelling until now it is a miniature Custom House Tower . . .

Major Francis Murphy, who put the "Shu" in Nashua, has come to the front again for St. Anselm's, agreeing to dispose of 1000 tickets for Saturday's game with the University of New Hampshire. "Murph" is one of the finest sportsmen in this or any other part of the country . . . And, speaking of the St. Anselm's-New Hampshire game, it would seem that Coach Bill Cowell is a trifle concerned over the outcome for he insists that the Pinardville aggregation keep their star freshmen, Johnny Spirida and Joe Kelley out of the game.

Although his name was missing, I'll wager Oliver Cutts was a guest at the Dave Morey banquet . . . Jack Onslow, the Red Sox coach, is hitting nothing but line drives at his baseball school of the air . . : The Minnesota Gophers have played to 250,000 in six games . . . John "Bananas" Bernardi, pro at Charles River, is one of the most violent types of hockey fans . . . Michigan is apparently coming out of its shell, for Phil Pack, the publicity director, is delving into the cost of serving coffee to the scribes.

"Honey" Walker, the Detroit Red Wing trainer, worked for Bill Yawkey years ago and one of his duties was the care of Tom Yawkey, who "Honey" says, was a great kid . . . Jerry Roscoe means as much to Yale as Duane Purvis does to Purdue . . . There is no better managerial timber in the ranks of the N. H. L. than Nels Stewart, the crafy Bruin . . . Marty Brill has registered as a football coach at La Salle and is deserving of an opportunity to a big college . . . When Manager Jack Adams sent Connie King to the Detroit Olympics, the Anderson - King combination, which had played together for years, was broken up.

In behalf of his New Britain high school team, undefeated in nine games, Coach "Chick" Shea has hurled a challenge to the best Bay State team. A Lawrence high-New Britain high game would be a real post-season attraction. Shea and Al Fusonie, both former Dartmouth athletes, are the ranking Connecticut schoolboy coaches. Fusonie enjoyed an unbeaten season at Taft School.

Judging from the reports of right hooks and left jabs let fly by the Tigers during the Yale game, Princeton can't take it . . . Minnesota is plugging all lines to get Pug Lund on the All-America eleven, but it appears as though Bill Bevan, the guard, will be the lone Gopher representative . . . It should be a great schoolboy hockey season, for the first request for complimentary tickets came through today . . . Don't underrate Notre Dame against Army Saturday. Elmer Layden has a better club than its record shows . . . The defeat by Colgate failed to convince the Syracuse alumni that Andy Kerr has a better club than Vic Hanson.

Now that Harry Newman, the Giants sensational passer, is out for the season with a back injury, the Redskins have better than an even chance of finishing at the top of their division . . . Cooney Weiland, who is now a member of Jack Adams' Red Wings, has been home for a couple of days. He lost no time boarding a "rattler" after Detroit knocked off Les Canadiens in Montreal on Saturday.

In all probability, the colleges will get together during the off season and ban all radio broadcasts. There is no question that attendances are affected by broadcasts, and it is too tough a proposition for colleges to balance their budgets in these times without the added obstacle of airing games . . . Charlie Sands made a decided hit with the Bruin fans in the St. Louis game and promises to be a big favorite in the Hub.

EASY SAILING RATED BEST AT BOWIE BY WILSON

Mr. Boston Says:—

Londos After George
Meets Kanpfer Here
Dempsey Keeps Active

By Jack Conway

JIM LONDOS, gorgeous Greek heavyweight, is coming back to Boston to open a drive for undisputed title recognition. The first step in the Londos campaign was the acceptance of a match with Hans Kanpfer, giant German, at the Garden on Thanksgiving night.

Paul Bowser located Londos in the Southwest, and offered him the tussle with Kanpfer. Londos accepted the bout on condition that he recieve a match with Ed Don George if he wins.

Mr. Boston

Londos and George battled for more than three hours in a tussle at Fenway Park last Summer. The decision was a draw.

Londos says the Fenway Park bout convinced him he is George's master. He is confident he will prove his superiority in the event he can obtain another meeting with George.

* * *

* * *

The former middleweight champion is down to 161 pounds, one pound above the middleweight class limit. If Lou beats Gainor, he intends to file a challenge against Teddy Yarosz with the New York Athletic Commission.

* * *

Jock McAvoy has delayed his departure for this country until the early part of January. The British middleweight champion says he will take on all-comers when he arrives here.

* * *

Max Waxman, who is here as manager of Jack Dempsey, is also active in the interest of Vince Dundee, former world middleweight champion. Dundee won the title from Lou Brouillard at the Garden, and later lost it to Teddy Yarosz in Pittsburgh.

* * *

Waxman was in a huddle with Ray Cass, Garden matchmaker, and is gunning for a McAvoy bout with Dundee.

* * *

B. A. A. Amateur Boxing

TOM KANALY of the B. A. A. has a fine amateur boxing tournament billed for tomorrow night. There will be bouts for novices at 126 pounds, while the 135, 147 and 160-pound divisions will be open. It is expected there will be 20 bouts.

* * *

Dempsey Keeps Active

JACK DEMPSEY continues to be one of the most active persons in the word of sports. He hopped down to the Cape last night to referee a mat bout. He was scheduled to step in as referee at a Charley Gordon show at Mechanics Building tonight.

Dempsey travels more in a year than any other athlete with the exception of Jim Londos and Ed George. The star wrestlers hold the travel titles.

Dempsey retains his ability to draw at the box office. There are still thousands of persons who have never seen the former champion, which gives him a big field from which to draw new customers.

Bruins Have Improved

THE BRUINS have already started to show improvement under the capable coaching of Frank Patrick. The latter is well versed in the fundamentals of hockey, and has the ability to direct and inspire his players. I look for the Bruins to regain much of their former popularity under the Patrick management.

HUSKY SEXTET OUT FRIDAY

Northeastern puckmen get off to an "early" start Friday, when the candidates report to Coach H. Nelson Raymond at 6:45 a. m., at the Arena.

The school will have another outstanding sextet this year, according to Coach Raymond. Only three members of last year's team were lost by graduation.

The schedule calls for contests with M. I. T., Boston College, Brown, Bowdoin, Colby, Mass. State, and New Hampshire.

ACAUTAW LOOKS BEST IN FIELD OF SPRINTERS

The swift-running daughter of Happy Argo and Rough Sea appears to stand out in the light, and needs only a fair shake with Lady Luck in order to reach the winner's circle. George Seabo, who is riding in great form at this particular session, is slated to have the mount.

FIRST RACE

CHORTLE, M. J. BRENNAN, MANTADOS

CHORTLE, a consistent performer during the recent Narragansett meeting, is meeting about the same as he drubbed on New England tracks. A breezing half in .49 attests to his fitness. M. J. BRENNAN, a bullet from the barrier, is favored by an outside post position and figures to offer the top one strong competition. MANTADOS is the Clocker's choice, but I just can't move him up past the third hole.

SECOND RACE

ACAUTAW, LAW SUIT, CANDESCENT

Acautaw, a winner over Band Wagon a few days back at Pimlico, is fond of his racing strip and it is due to this reason that I'm placing him on top of this speedy field. LAW SUIT, a classy performer, appears to have the best of the weight arrangements, but it remains to be seen just how he will perform over the track. CANDESCENT is in well under 109 pounds and is fully capable of upsetting the dope.

THIRD RACE

COMMONWEALTH, OUT REIGH, ROUGH DIAMOND

I find it impossible to go past COMMONWEALTH'S last winning race in this number. The Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords color bearer drubbed High Glee and other older ones over the same distance at Pimlico in that effort. OUR REIGH will likely have the backing of the clocking fraternity. The royally bred son of Reigh Count and Anita Peabody whirled a sizzling mile in 1:42 2-5 for his final. ROUTH DIAMOND, a winner of three straight races, is stepping up a bit, but the Whitneyite's recent efforts would suggest that he be all dangerous.

FOURTH RACE

ADVOCATE JUNIOR, LEGENDARY, SUN WAY

ADVOCATE JUNIOR showed a decided liking for this strip when he finished fourth behind Campagna, Tight Wad and Salisbury on Monday afternoon. The son of Advocate displayed high speed and was right atop a fast early pace before weakneing a furlong out. LEGENDARY, plater from the P. M. Walker stable, is credited with several fair races on his past record and figures to offer the contention. SUN WRY wasa poor second to Parwee last out.

FIFTH RACE

WATCH HIM, SOON OVER, SILENT SHOT

WATCH HIM, a corking third behind Identify and Only One in the Prince George Handicap, needs only to run back to that last effort in order to grace the winner's circle in this event. The son of Fair Wind came from far back in that last effort to be beaten only a length and a half for all the money. SOON OVER closed the favorite in the Prince George, but received a thorough going over leaving the gate and finished far back in the ruck. May hap, the Greentree colt will prove a stubborn customer with clear sailing. SILENT SHOT, a brisk morning worker, looks as good as anything else for the show award.

SIXTH RACE

BALIOS, UNENCUMBERED, FLAGSTONE

BALIOS is meeting practically the same lot that he drubbed over the mile and one-sixteenth route on Saturday. The distance of this affair is a sixteenth longer, but is quqite within the staying powers of the B. B. Stable colorbearer. UNENCUMBERED was a fast going third in back of the top one last out and figures all dangerous in tris number. FLAGSTONE changel hands after his last race, but that should not stop him from breaking into the picture.

SEVENTH RACE

Easy Sailing, Repeal, Hermie Boy

EASY SAILING will have the speedy REPEAL to down in this affair. The latter ran a whale of a race to place to POTION last time. HERMIE BOY is endowed with a bit of class and is much better than his recent races will attest. Mayhap, the Calumet castoff will elect to come to life.

Montana to Meet Stewart at Beach

Chuck Montana of Detroit and "Wild Man" Lloyd Stewart of Lynn will meet in the main mill of Promoter Jimmy Mede's wrestling show at the new Walkathon Arena, Revere, tomorrow night.

Drop-kick Murphy of Malden will tackle Fred Moran of Newport, R. I., in the semi-windup.

Other matches pair Archie Campbell, Canada, and Roughhouse Hagen, Texas; Jean-Baptiste LaRue, Quebec, and Nick Coste, Italy; and Al Ventres, Fall River, and Rudolph Rudy, Germany.

DEMPSEY PLANS BAER BOUT IN JUNE

By Arthur Constantine

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Mexico City, Nov. 20—Max Baer will defend his heavyweight championship in June in one of four cities—Chicago, London, Philadelphia or New York.

Ancil Hoffman, manager of the California clown, made this assertion here today with a note of finality. Hoffman emphasized that in naming the prospective battlegrounds, he named New York last.

And none other than Jack Dempsey, ex-king of the heavies and now proprietor of a bar in New York, advertised as the longest bar in Manhattan, will promote the championship bout.

HAMAS SECOND CHOICE

Hoffman, in disclosing Baer's future plans, said:

"Jack Peterson, heavy champion of England, is our Number One choice.

"Dempsey, we understand, is dickering with Peterson for a contract. That fight is preferred to all others—it would draw a gate of more than a half-million dollars.

"Steve Hamas, of New York, is our second choice. He has been showing well lately, we think.

"Fourth—Well, fourth on the list is the renowned Primo Carnera, from whose mountainous head Max lifted the crown last year in Long Island City.

"Dempsey will be the promoter, and the fight will be either in Chicago, London, Philadelphia or New York.

"James R. Crofton of Cuernavaca, Mexico, Agua Cliente and San Diego, will back the fight. He and I are making this announcement together.

"Baer is under agreement positively to defend his title in June. I said positively."

CONTRACT INVALID

Crofton echoed Ancil on the "positively." The promoter owns the Selva Casino at Cuernavaca and is part owner of the Agua Caliente Casino.

He showed a telegram from Dempsey stating Baer's contract with Madison Square Garden to fight his first championship bout for that outfit, was "null and void."

"It's the McCoy, gentlemen. It's all okay with me, too."

B. U. Loses Captain and Gifted Soph

Boston University's basketball hopes this fall are rather poor due to the unexpected loss of the captain and one of the most promising sophomores.

Freddie Hale, an outstanding forward the past two years and captain this fall, will not be able to play until February because of academic probation. The other loss is Bill Siegel, who has an afternoon job.

Kelly to Coach Reds

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 20—George Kelly, former Giants first baseman, and Tom Sheehan, former Hollywood pitcher, have been named coaches by the Cincinnati Reds. Bert Shotton has been dropped.

'Pa' Corbin Unfolds Amazing Feats of Eli Iron Men in '88

By Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 20—To Yale men, the year 1888 produced two blizzards—the one in March, and "Pa" Corbin's great team of "Iron Men" which stormed through a 13-game schedule undefeated, untied and unscored on.

When the Yale eleven played through the Princeton game Saturday without making a substitution, William H. "Pa" Corbin and his '88 eleven were catapulted into the glare of the spotlight once again today.

Corbin, who makes his home here, paid tribute to Coach Ducky Pond's present Yale team and only after hailing the triumph over Princeton as "one of the greatest victories Yale has ever scored" was "Pa" willing to talk about his '88 team.

PLAYED TWICE A WEEK

"Without bragging," said Corbin, "we didn't think anything of playing football twice a week or even on consecutive days. We played through our thirteen-game schedule without making a substitution in nine of the games.

"In the other four contests, we had to make one replacement in each of the games, twice because of injuries and the other two times because of one of our men violating a major rule. We scored 698 points while holding our opponents scoreless."

The regular team that year lined up with William C. Wurtenberg, quarterback; Lee McClung and William P. Graves, halfbacks; William T. Bull, fullback; Alonzo Stagg, now coaching at Pacific College, and Frederic C. Wallace, ends; George W. Woodruff and Charles O. Gill, tackles; W. W. (Pudge) Heffelfinger and William C. Rhodes, guards, and Corbin, center.

The team defeated Wesleyan, 76-0; Rutgers, 65-0; Penn, 34-0; Wesleyan, 46-0; Amherst, 39-0; Williams, 30-0; M. I. T., 68-0; Stevens, 69-0; Penn, 58-0; Crescent A. C., 28-0; Amherst, 70-0; Wesleyan, 105-0; Princeton, 10-0.

Amherst and Williams were met on successive days, three days separated the first meeting with Penn, and the second battle with Wesleyan; while M. I. T., Stevens and the second game with Penn were played within a space of 10 days.

FORWARD PASS UNKNOWN

"We did this without the aid of forward passes," said Corbin.

"Football today is much the same as when I played the game, the fundamentals are identical—blocking, kicking, tackling—although some of the tackling I have seen lately isn't so good," asserted "Pa."

"They don't try for field goals as much as they did in '88, but maybe that's because they only count 3 points now insted of the 5 in my time."

Corbin hesitated for a moment, as though refreshing his memory, and said: "Funny thing, but every time it rains, it recalls our second game with Amherst. It poured so hard that day, November 10, we decided to forego the intermission, changed sides and continued playing with the same team that started. Each half then was 45 minutes long.

"It must have been the blizzard," said Corbin.

DEMO TO LEAD TECH FIVE

Johnny Demo, crack guard on the M. I. T. basketball team for two years, has been chosen captain of the Engineer quintet.

Demo's home is in North Adams, Mass. He is a senior. Last year his play enabled the Cardinal and Gray to win over Harvard.

In addition to his athletic prowess, only a few days ago he was chosen a member of Tau Beta Pi, highest scholastic honor an undergraduate at Technology may win.

For the first time since 1928 the Tech team will play Boston University, as well as Harvard, Brown, Vermont and Tufts.

He will appear here tonight as the referee of the battle royal, main bout fray of Charlie Gordon's wrestling show at Mechanics Building. Ted Germaine, Jose Firpo, Cannonball Grange and Bull Curry will tussle in the free-for-all.

Tiger Jack said as he boarded the train, "Hannah is a great deal better. 'There is nothing to worry about now.' She had a bad cold and a high fever."

TRIPLE TIE FOR HONORS IN ICE LEAGUE

By Associated Press

Montreal, Nov. 20—In accord with the Toronto Maple Leafs's position at the top of the International division and the Detroit Red Wings' high standing in the American section, the ace marksmen of the two clubs dominated the first weekly scoring statistics of the National Hockey League.

With Charlie Conacher, the circuit's leading scorer last year, and Harvey Jackson of the Leafs tied for first place with Johnny Sorrell of the Wings, 12 of the 17 leading scorers are from either Toronto or Detroit.

SCORED 5 POINTS APIECE

The pace-setting trio have accumulated five points each. Conacher and Jackson put their totals together with three goals and two assists, while Sorrell, who appears to be duplicating his early spurt of last year, built up his five points by one goal and four aiding plays.

Close behind the Leafs' young marksmen is the veteran, Hec Kilrea, with four points, while Sorrell finds himself trailed in the American division by three of his teammates, Eddie Wiseman, Larry Aurie and Cooney Weiland, and Tommy Cook of the Chicago-Blackhawks.

No less than six players are tied in total goals with three each. They include in addition to Conacher, and Jackson, Kilrea, Wiseman, Bill Cook of the Rangers and Ebbie Goodfellow of the Wings.

BARRY BAD MAN

The honor of leading in assists goes to Sorrell and Weiland. Taeir four aiding plays gives them a lead of one over Aurie.

Marty Barry, considered a clean player, has spent the most time in the penalty box. He has been penalized 24 minutes, two more than Baldy Northcott, of the Maroons and four more than "Red" Horner, of Toronto.

The leading scorers:

BOXING JUDGES TO BE BANNED IN NEW YORK

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

New York, Nov. 20—This writer's suggestion that the New York Commission do away with judges at boxing contests, and leave the decision to the referee, is likely to be adopted very shortly.

The referees will occasionally make mistakes, perhaps, but these mistakes will not be as consistently ludicrous as the boners of the judges.

By appointing a limited staff of referees, and keeping them all working as often as possible to gain experience, the Commission will soon arrive at a reasonable percentage of accuracy in decisions, which is better than having them 75 per cent wrong.

After placing the responsibility in the hands of the referees, however, the members of the Commission must learn to discipline themselves not to interfere when their personal opinion happens to disagree with the judgment of the referees.

In Yale's victory over Princeton, the writer thinks he detects something of the heavy hand of "Greasy" Neale, notably in Yale using only eleven men throughout the contest.

"Greasy" Neale is assistant to Raymond "Ducky" Pond, head coach at Yale. "Greasy" Neale of West Virginia was one of the greatest ends that ever played football, and is a fine coach in his own right.

Harry Newman Lost to N. Y. Giants

New York, Nov. 20 (INS)—Harry Newman, star quarterback of the New York Giants, and former All-America luminary at the University of Michigan, is out of national pro-league competition for the remainder of the season, it became known today.

Newman was injured in the third period of the Giants' game with the Chicago Bears at the Polo Grounds on Sunday. An examination at St. Elizabeth's Hospital disclosed that several vertebrae in his spine had been injured, and that it would be necessary for him to wear a brace indefinitely.

M'GRATH TELLS OF TERMS IN CUBS' SUIT

Edward McGrath, Jr., of St. Paul street, Brookline, captain of the 1931 Harvard baseball team, today began suit against the Chicago Cubs for breach of an oral contract, before Judge Chrles L. Carr, in municipal civil court.

McGrath testified that he was approached in May, 1931, by John J. "Jack" Doyle, scout for the Chicago team, and entered into an agreement with Doyle to sign up with the Cubs after his graduation from Harvard that June.

He further testified that he was to be paid a $5000 for signing and $500 a month. There was to be a clause included in the contract by which his salary would be the same, if he were sent to a minor league team for seasoning.

TALKED WITH MITCHELL

While talking with Doyle, McGrath said, William Vleck former president of the Cubs, called on the telephone, and McGrath, as given to understand that his terms were to be met. He said he talked with Fred Mitchell, coach of the Harvard team and scout and business manager for the Boston Braves about the offer.

"Mitchell told me not to sign a contract until after I was graduated," said McGrath. "After the last game of the season that June I wired the Cubs management and they failed to keep their agreement. I had turned down several offers from other clubs, thinking all the time that the Cubs would make good their offer."

McGrath was taken under a lengthy cross-examination by Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, who was substituting for Samuel Silverman, former Boston Corporation Counsel, who is counsel of record for the defendant Chicago clubs.

McGrath testified under cross-examination that he lost $7500 in 1932 when he took over the franchise of the Wareham club in the Cape Cod League, and then again failed to make a success of the Provincetown team in 1933.

Doyle was called to the stand after McGrath rested his case on his own testimony. Doyle said he talked with McGrath at the Hotel Somerset and asked him what his terms would be.

VLECK CALLED

"I told him that I didn't want to hang around for two or three weeks watching him play, if it were going to be impossible to reach terms with him," Doyle testified.

"When he mentioned the $5000 bonus and $500 monthly salary, I told him that was ridiculous, but that I would have Mr. Vleck call me the next night. We had dinner together and Vleck called and I told him of McGrath's terms, Mr. Vleck said they were absolutely impossible, and told me to tell McGrath that if he made the grade with the club we'd give him $400 or $500 a month salary and possibly a $500 bonus at the end of the season.

"McGrath said he couldn't take that offer and that there were four or five other clubs that would meet his terms. I told him he'd better get it then, because we were all through."

The case was continued this afternoon.

Working Hunters in Armory Show

Working hunters, regularly ridden to hounds during the past season by the foxhunting enthusiasts affiliated with the eight recognized hunt clubs in Massachusetts, will compete in two classes of their own on the opening night of the 110th Cavalry horse show at Commonwealth Armory.

Robert B. Almy, prominent Boston horseman, who rode on last season's championship 110th Cavalry polo team, is in charge of the two events, a Corinthian class sweepstakes and a hunt team class, in which the winner will receive a handsome trophy.

Equip the Police

Fit Them Out to Fight Crime

THE fatal shooting of Isaiah L. McLain, veteran Malden patrolman, has brought to light some severe arraignments of the present methods of arming the police.

Apparently unable to reach his revolver when a criminal he was questioning proved to be armed, the case of Officer McLain is cited in a campaign for the better equipment of the police.

President Thomas B. Delaney of the Lowell City Council, for example, will launch an investigation of police arming when he calls the council into session this evening.

Mr. Delaney believes the Malden patrolman's slaying

"Makes it imperative that the government in every city find out whether it is expecting its police officers to offer themselves as defenseless targets for the bullets of any crazed or desperate criminal."

Investigations made among police officers in different sections of Massachusetts and the rest of New England reveal that some have not carried or fired a gun for years.

Patrolmen privately express dissatisfaction over being made to carry weapons, when these are allowed them, in sections of clothing hard to reach quickly.

Different police departments could start an interesting museum with the quaint old guns kept at headquarters, presumably to defend taxpayers.

Let us equip our police EVERYWHERE AND AT ONCE in the best way to enable them to fight criminals.

And, when they are equipped, TRAIN them in the USE OF GUNS.

Last of the Whalers

Only One Cruises Under Sail

"And pray, sir, what in the world is equal to it?"
—Edmund Burke's reference in Parliament to the Nantucket whale-fishery.

It had no equal then; but now the story of the last whaler is being written.

In less than a century the New England fleet of 1000 whaling ships has passed into oblivion, and in all the United States there are but 14 vessels still engaged in pursuing the leviathan of the deep. Of these, only one is under sail.

Nantucket is now a summer resort. New Bedford is a textile center. We take our oil from the earth; hard-times pessimists provide the blubber. The old order changes and the whale-fishery, like the Pequod, has gone down with Tashtego's flag and sky-hawk nailed to the mast.

In the world today there is nothing that exactly equals it. Yet courage and hardship are still afloat, and a counterpart of the old whalers are the men who go down to the banks for the winter fishing, braving death in their small boats to wrest a meager living from the same old stormy sea.

Alice in Wonderland Dead?

Well, We Doubt It

Alice in Wonderland dead?

The cables say so.

"Mrs. Alice Hargreaves, long ill, succumbs at home in Kent."

It was seventy-years ago, drifting in a boat on a quiet English stream, that she listened to Lewis Carroll's stories of the Red Queen, the rabbit, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, and the other figures from make-believe who have since become the friends of children and grown-ups wherever the English tongue is heard. And now Alice is dead.

So the cables say, but literal truth is often the sheerest falsehood.

Her mortal body may be laid to rest, but she lives on, and will live forever in the hearts of all to whom the realm of charm and humor and fancy is more real than any humdrum world of fact.

Cuts License Fees

Weymouth Sets Good Example

What's this? It can't be so!

But it really is.

Here is a community lowering the cost of something.

In case it should be inferred from the foregoing that Weymouth now has its own breweries and distilleries, let it be stated that the reduction in fees is in response to public demand in a municipality whose treasury is in such excellent condition that public demand for lower costs are being met.

A good many townships would profit from a study of Weymouth financial records.

Toys for Firemen

To Fix Up for Kiddies

Automobiles are reconditioned, so why not toys for Christmas? The idea may sound new, but it is already under way for 1934.

The Newtonville Women's Club is soliciting used toys to be reconditioned by kind-hearted firemen for distribution to poor kiddies Dec. 25.

Mrs. J. Walter Allen offers to call for toys. For the children's sake we certainly hope she's kept very busy. And that other communities will adopt the plan.

Many Hands Fill Welcome Baskets

Bringing joy to needy families.
Christmas baskets filled to brimming
With the foods of Yuletide teeming.

If you have been blessed with plenty,
Think of others; aid them freely.
'Tis the spirit true of Christmas

Listen, World -:- By Elsie Robinson

Are Journalists Honest Citizens or Hired Cheats?

First I was surprised. Then shocked. Then hurt. THEN MADDER'N BLAZES!

About what?

Elsie Robinson

About the General Notion concerning us newspaper writers. This idea that we never mean anything we say, but are "just playing to the gallery" . . . saying whatever we think the public wants to hear, nasty muck or maudlin nonsense, anything "as long as it sells papers." But, of course, never believing a word of it.

For—according to this quaint theory—no journalist ever has a smitch of use for his readers; secretly he classifies them all as silly sheep or stupid swine.

But we writers must eat, says this theory, so we flatter and pretend, play upon the emotions regardless of the vicious consequences.

"BOSS MAKES YOU"

Or perhaps it isn't the Public but the Boss we want to please. In that case we write whatever we're told, even though it's against every personal ideal. What's honor to us, compared to a fat pay check? Nothing at all—if you believe the average citizen.

Nor are these merely the notions of illiterate loafers or malicious morons.

Experienced, educated people—even one's dearest friends—share the idea. Did they—you ask—read that article you wrote about the coming election? Or your last week's editorial on motherhood?

Yes—they reply with a tolerant smile—they have read these articles. But, of course—they smile knowingly—they didn't take them seriously. For they know you didn't mean a word you said.

You say things like that because you have to, your boss makes you.

At this you probably go right through the ceiling. What the heck do they mean? Whereupon they stare in genuine surprise. What's the matter with you, blowing up like that! Everyone knows that writers never write what they mean.

They wouldn't dare!—the Boss'd fire 'em. But they aren't really blaming you. Then why should you be so mad—acting just as if they'd insulted you?

TAKEN FOR GRANTED

Because they HAVE insulted you. They have no more right to assume that you are a liar merely because you are a journalist than you would have to assume the same thing of them. A writer sells his words as honestly as any other man sells his flour, flannel, lumber, stocks or bonds.

No sane person would dream of libelling the honor of a fine wife or mother without grave evidence to support such a claim.

Yet, let that same wife and mother BE A NEWSPAPER WRITER and it is taken for granted that her, standards are for sale to the highest bidder!

The simple fact is—no important writer could be induced for any sum to write a word he did not really mean. And no smart Boss would dream of trying to make him. A writer's power depends on his SPONTANEITY and SINCERITY.

Lacking these qualities, the most imposing words are empty sound—and it would be a waste of valuable space to print them. Yet try and make Bill Brown believe that!

And so we have an amazing and deplorable situation. Never has human existence been so topsy-turvy, nor the republic so greatly in need of wise interpreters. And never were there more honest, intelligent men and women laboring at that job.

Yet nine-tenths of their labors are wasted simply because the world assumes, without the slightest proof, that they are HIRED CHEATS WHO'D DO ANYTHING FOR MONEY.

You don't believe it? All right—I'm waiting to be shown—and I'll be tickled pink if you can prove I'm wrong.

Little Boy They Knew -:- -:- By Winifred Black

The little boy has been gone away a long, long time. So long that if he had lived he would be a man by now and worried to death about how to make his living, I suppose, like half of the other young fellows these days.

Winifred Black

He was such a gay, happy, little chap, so strong and well, and so full of glorious vitality that it was like a tonic to have him come into the room.

The little boy was handsome, too, and very, very bright.

But the best thing about him was that he was friendly and affectionate and always trying to do something to make somebody happy.

HIS OLD NURSE

Oh, no, he was no saint, and no sissy either. He had his fights and his faults, but oh, what a shining place of light-hearted joy he made the little world where he lived, bless his generous, loving, little heart.

And now he is gone, there is none like him left—not one, not to those who knew and loved the little boy.

But the other day the nurse who had charge of him from the time he began to walk came to see me.

She had been taking care of a rather lonely little boy, whose mother is so busy that she is not at home very much, and whose father is away a great deal, too.

"He's a fine little fellow," said the old nurse, "but he isn't like the little boy we used to know. You know the little boy we knew was always laughing and singing and running and playing and building airplanes and climbing trees and leaning way out on the garden wall and the wall was a great ship sailing far seas and the little boy was the captain—do you remember?

"Well, this little chap I'm taking care of isn't quite so gay and light-hearted. Oh, there's nothing wrong with him, he's a nice little fellow, but life isn't just one glorious adventure after the other—not to him.

"He knows all about the little boy we knew. He'd rather have me tell him stories about the little boy and what he did and said and how he looked and what songs he used to sing, than to hear any story out of the red book or the yellow book which Mr. Andrew Lang wrote for children.

TO SEE HIM AGAIN

"And when he does not want to drink his milk at the right time, he looks at me and says: "'Did the little boy always drink his milk whether he wanted to or not?'

"And I say 'always' and down goes the milk.

"How the little boy we knew would laugh if he heard me tell such a fib about him.

"And when this little chap of mine now, is cross, I say 'Why our little boy never spoke so to me, he put his arms around my neck and said he loved me.'

"And this little chap runs back to me from the door and hugs me and says, 'I love you, too, Nursey,' and everything is all right again."

I wish I could see the little chap the old nurse told me about this morning when she came to see me, and talk about the old days, I wish I could.

NAMING THE BABY

Grandma's choice is Mary.
Grandpa shakes his head.
Always so contrary,
He wants Jane instead.
But the baby's father
Vetoes either plan,
Saying he would rather
Call her Alice Ann.

Names we have by dozens
For our baby girl;
Several aunts and cousins
Want to call her Pearl.

It's so hard to pick names
Which all agree upon,
Especially so, with nicknames
Sure to follow on.

Matilda ends in Tillie
And Josephine in Joe;
To Violet and Lily
The men folks all say "NO!"
But whatso'er it may be—
Priscilla, May or Rose—
'Tis possible the baby
Won't like it when she grows.

Stars and Stripes

That water project war is all off. Arizona couldn't lick Uncle Sam—not by a dam site.

Economist says we are headed almost overnight for the greatest prosperity the world ever dreamed of. Will somebody please call us in time for breakfast?

What's become of the Dean Brothers? Have they gotten over being Dizzy and Daffy?

Human Side of the News

The Story of a Brook

By Edwin C. Hill

GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The oldest living thing in the Island of Manhattan—the throbbing heart of New York City—is not a man or a tree. It is a brook (for surely an ageless, changeless brook is a living thing) and it has cost the city hundreds of thousands, if not millions of dollars.

It is one of the strangest brooks in the world because, until recently (and as it well may again), it crept along underground as it had crept for countless centuries, defying every scheme and effort of the engineers to harness or control it.

WHERE PAN PERCHES

It is old Minetta brook, this oldest living thing of Manhattan Isle. If you should chance some day to visit a certain hotel in historic Washington Square, you would see, in greenish bronze, the figure of the infant god Pan shrilling his pipes, a figure of infinite grace.

And up from the basin where Pan perches, you would see a purling stream of clear, cold water, spurting straight upward from the foundation rock of Manhattan.

That water is from New York's strange subterranean river, old Minetta brook, trapped and tamed in this particular spot by the cunning engineers, but elsewhere stealing along far under the roots of the skyscrapers to make its way to the North river and the sea.

Of all the brooks and watercourses New York has ever known, old Minetta has been the most restless and unconfinable. It has spoiled the disposition of engineers and architects and harried them to the point of lunacy.

BALKS ENGINEERS

For more than a hundred years, it balked the plans of the engineers as they delved deep for the foundations of their towers, or the line of their subways. Always they had to deal with this subtle antagonist, ceaselessly flowing deep down under the foundations of Fifth and Washington Square and the southern part of Greenwich Village.

They knew they could not destroy the brook, so they worked guilefully to flatter it, precisely as the constructors of the Washington Arch had done many years ago, when they, too, had to face the same old problem of the eccentricities of Minetta brook.

So the engineers for a new hotel drove giant piles into the rock and clay, far below the bed of Minetta, and went to pumping with giant pumps until the piles could be aligned into solid steel walls reenforced with concrete.

And over this they built a roof or ceiling of steel and concrete—the whole deep down under the foundations of the hotel, and, when they were through, they silenced the pumps, and Minetta water flowed back into its old course, making toward the Hudson, but this time, for fifty yards or so, through a steel and concrete tunnel.

SPIRIT OF SORTS

It was no inconsiderable victory they won over the ancient brook. Flowing under Greenwich Village till memory has made it a legend, the waters of Minetta again greet the light through this fountain as the Spirit of Manhattan rising to greater glory.

Without doubt, there is a spirit of sorts in old Minetta water, so changeless after all the centuries, after all that man has done to Manhattan Island.

He has transformed Manhattan; plowed it and scraped it, filled in its valleys, leveled its hills, drained its ancient ponds, covered it with towers, dug deep into it and built subterranean roadways, but Minetta water still flows on oblivious of its power, a little contemptuous.

A century ago, it pursued its meandering course in the light of day, and men who have not been under the ground many years fished for trout along its willow and flower-lined banks.

Men who could not long have been under ground could send their minds back to the boys and girls that used to meet on the Kissing Bridge over Minetta water at Fifth avenue and Eighth street, where, by ancient custom, the girls had to pay toll of a kiss, or maybe a kiss or two.

TIMES CHANGED

But the times changed, and the whole surface of Manhattan changed as well, rising foot upon foot in new strata, and Minetta gradually disappeared, sinking far underground but still inflexibly and mysteriously holding its appointed course toward Hudson's river.

The Algonquins, who were here before the Dutch, called it "Manetti," its true name, and "Manetti" in the Indian tongue meant "Devil Water."

Hendrik Van Loon

DISCUSSES

Life of Governments

No government has ever been destroyed by outside political influence. When a particular form of civilization has outlived its own usefulness, and when those in power no longer believe in their own cause, then such a form of government or such a form of civilization will die and it will disappear, as all other physical and mental and spiritual organisms will die and disappear, the moment they have outlived their own usefulness.

Hendrik Van Loon

Their place is thereupon occupied by other organisms which are younger and therefore more vigorous and energetic. In due course of time these new political organisms will develop and prosper until they grow too old to believe in themselves.

Then they, too, will die and disappear, as countless others have done before them, and this is as it should be, for it is the primary law of all historical evolution.

I thought that I would pack all I had to say into my first few paragraphs. Then we know what we are talking about, and that is a good thing in any discussion.

I have always suspected that history is not merely an art but also a science. I have always suspected that quite like physics and chemistry and mathematics and all the other sciences, history must be subject to certain very definite laws of behavior and that it is up to us to discover these laws.

Such a discovery (like most other discoveries) can never be a one-man job. Here and now I appeal to the layman to help me, for another law of history seems to prove that all the great inventions and discoveries of the past have been made by intelligent laymen. The professionals then hastened to the front and claimed the credit.

DO YOU AGREE?

And so I ask you here and now whether you agree with me that no form of government has ever been destroyed by an outside influence, but that governments are like people and grow old and die, and that it is only then that their place is taken by a more vigorous group of youngsters who say, "Get out of the way, old fellow, and let somebody rule who can."

I have often used this argument when talking about the state of our nation with fellow-citizens who were much wrought up by the threat of what they were pleased to call "the destruction of our Constitution." I do not share their fear and think that they might find lots of other and more important things to worry about. The men who built our Constitution, as a bulwark against attack from the outside and the inside, knew what they were doing. The chief perpetrator of that astonishing document was an excellent architect, and he paid quite as much attention to the basement as to the roof.

Eventually, since all living matter is subject to the law of change, that Constitution, too, will have to be modified, as every other human document, ever since the beginning of time, has had to be modified after an interval of two or three centuries.

But today the Constitution is still as much alive as ever, because the majority of the people still firmly believe in it. It is only when a paper document is no longer backed up by the flesh and blood of a large number of people that it becomes a scrap of printed wood-pulp.

LEARN FOR YOURSELF

All this you will discover for yourself by giving a moment's thoughts to certain events of the most recent past. The House of Romanov was not destroyed by the Bolsheviks. Lenin and his followers would have been absolutely helpless against the old Russian regime of even 50 years ago, when the majority of the Russian people still believed in that particular form of government.

But when Nicholas II and his supporters fumbled the crown, and when the Imperial Crown was lying helplessly in the ditch, then it was that the Communists grabbed the emblem of government; and since there was nobody to tell them "No," they have held on to it ever since.

The same holds true of the House of Hohenzollern. The Emperor William was not expelled from Germany by Comrade Ebert and his Socialist friends. It was much simpler than that. The House of Hohenzollern had outlived its usefulness. Nobody in Germany any longer cared to fight for it. The crown of Germany was voluntarily vacated by its former owner when the Kaiser deserted his army and fled to Holland.

STORY OF GOVERNMENTS

But since nature abhors a vacuum (another law which holds as true for politics as for physics) the seat of the Mighty in Germany was immediately occupied by a group of newcomers.

When the French Revolution broke out, neither Louis XVI himself nor his advisers believed any longer in the old French system of government by organized despotism. The King and his friends had read so many of the books of their enemies that they had begun to lose all faith in their own good cause, and were willing to resign themselves to their fate. They committed suicide. They invited the axe-man to go ahead and do his worst. He did.

You can go all the way through history from the days of Hammurabi, who gave the world a New Deal in 2200 B. C. (he was the Babylonian from whom Moses got most of his ideas) until Franklin D. Roosevelt, who is trying to give us a New Deal in the year of grace 1934.

And by and large I think that you will find that I am right when I say that governments do not die until they are perfectly ready and willing to do so.
